

the result their commander curtly ordered in the words: "The line across St. Julien Wood must be held. The Canadians will hold it."

And when, after the three-day agony, the third British army came to the relief and the battered men of the western continent marched out, no more inspiring sight was ever witnessed than the little army passing through in-facing serried ranks of seasoned British warriors, each rigidly standing at "the present." The salute of St. Julien is Canada's forever!

---

We are requested to announce that the University of Toronto Press has in hand for the Historical Association of Annapolis Royal and will issue shortly a Book of Remembrance containing a record of the activities of the Association during part of 1921, as well as verbatim reports of speeches made and papers read on the occasion of the Triple Celebration of Historic events in old Fort Anne on the thirty-first of August that year. The issue will be limited to three hundred numbered copies—full cloth bound, with gilt title and illustrated.