

those countries in the organization and management of important development activities. The Special Fund began operation in 1959 and Canada, which played a leading part in its establishment, has been a member of the Fund's Governing Council since its inception. The Fund has received strong support from the developed, as well as the developing countries. To date, the Fund has approved 522 projects in 130 countries at a total cost of $1,149 million of which $673 million is being provided by the developing countries themselves.

Canada's annual contribution to the Special Fund for 1965 was $5 million, making it the fifth largest contributor.

The Expanded Programme for Technical Assistance (EPTA) is designed to provide experts, training facilities and technical knowledge to the developing countries. In 1964 alone, over 2,500 experts were sent to assist 130 countries and territories and more than 3,000 fellowships were granted to the nationals of 150 countries and territories. EPTA's work usefully complements Canadian bilateral aid programmes, such as that carried out under the Colombo Plan. EPTA has received increasing support over the years from members of the United Nations and is considered as one of its most effective activities.

Canada has consistently been one of the leading supporters of the programme. Canada contributed $2,300,000 to EPTA in 1965.

At this mid-point in the Development Decade, at a time when needs are increasing because of the population explosion and debt repayment problems in many developing countries, grave concern has been expressed in UNCTAD and other international forums that the flow of assistance to developing countries has levelled off.
