

[BOOK XVIII.

ar, and the other inden to escape the sword der the command of as collecting troops to dent army against the osable force was estinear 4,000 men, good sides 2,000 Creole and t army was variously
, but inferior in skill, the royalists under not thought probable ward to risk a general ty to the Spaniards is l as partisans or guein the most ferocious rcy is shown on either ldren are butchered to ilitary relatives. The rievously diminished ; three fourths of their ry have beset the remedness resulting from would require nothing edom to repay, and of deceived in his judges will be ad fallacy, who supposes to all indiscriminately, elinations ; a regard in ought evermore to be tional habits of those order for the mind of ent with servility, it is ged with superstitious person so instructed, r the properties which be, that he will have lol, paramount to all be found in a Briton's erty must sit irksome may be a meritorious ntiments, such as may creature ; but to force it, is only to produce herwise be at least not