CURRENT TRADE CONDITIONS. ONTARIO.

Lumbermen in Ontario are much encouraged by the inquiries for stock that have been received from all quarters. It is believed that when the mills shall close down for the season there will be very little unsold stock in the yards, and dealers who do not secure their winter supply during the next couple of months will in all probability be obliged to pay higher prices, and they may find it impossible to obtain stock at any price. A correspondent in the Georgian Bay district writes that the present activity in trade has not been equalled for many years. Mill culls which two years ago sold at $5 per thousand and now meet with a ready sale at an advance of $2.50 upon that figure, and none of the manufacturers have any large stock for sale. The lumbermen are already giving some attention to preparing for operations in the woods next winter. It is hoped that manufacturers will exercise precaution and restrict the log production. Although the market is strong, it would be a mistake to increase the production to any extent. The policy of each manufacturer should be to cut an average stock and obtain for it a remunerative price.

QUEBEC AND NEW BRUNSWICK.

In another column will be found a statement of timber measured at Quebec up to 25th July for three years, by which it will be observed that the receipts of waxy white pine this year are about the same as last season, while square pine shows a large decrease. There has also been a slight decrease in the receipts of red pine and an increase in birch and maple. Nothing has transpired within the past week to cause the market to fluctuate, and prices generally are steady, with a moderate demand. The proposed harbor works at Montreal will require a large quantity of timber. Although the government has only granted $750,000 for these works, it is expected that over $2,000,000 will be expended before they are completed. The local demand for lumber is being restricted on account of the scarcity of structural iron, as work on large buildings has been suspended until next season.
