"Like the two Kings of Brentford smelling at one nosegny."

In Brentford town, of old renown, There lived a Mister Bray, Who fell in love with Lucy Bell, And so did Mr. Clay.

To see her ride from Hammersmith, By all it was allowed, Such fair outsides are seldom seen, Such Angels on a Cloud.

Said Mr. Bray to Mr. Clay.
You choose to rival me.
And court Miss Bell, but there your court
No thoroughfare shall be.

Unless you now give up your suit, You may repeat your love, who have shot a pigeon match, Can shoot a turtle dove.

So pray before you woo her more, Consider what you do; If you pop aught to Lucy Bell — I'll pop it into you.

Said Mr. Clay to Mr. Bray, Your threats I quite explode; One who has been a volunteer Knows how to prime and load.

And so I say to you unless
Your passion quiet keeps,
I who have shot and hit bulls' eyes
May chance to hit a sheep's. Now gold is oft for silver changed, And that for copper red: But these two went away to give Lach other change for lead.

But first they sought a friend a piece,
This pleasant thought to give—
When they were dead, they thus should have
Two seconds still to live.

To measure out the ground not long
The seconds then forbore,
And having taken one rash step,
They took a dozen more.

They next prepared each pistol-pan Against the deadly strife, By putting in the prime of death Against the prime of life.

Now all was ready for the fees,
But when they took their stands
Fear made them tremble, so they found
They both were shaking hands.

Said Mr. C. to Mr. B.
Here one of us may fall,
And like St. Paul's Cathedral now,
Be doom'd to have a ball.

I do confess I did attach Misconduct to your name; If I withdraw the charge, will then Your ramrod do the same?

Said Mr. B. I do agree—
But think of Honour's Courts!
If we go off without a shot,
There will be strange reports. But look, the morning now is bright, Though cloudy it began; Why can't we aim above, as if We had call'd out the sun?

So up into the harmless air Their bullets they did send; And may all other duels have That upshot in the end.

VARIETIES.

There is a town in America, Lynn, in Massachusetts, of which all are shoemakers.—
There are more than 5,000 inhabitants, who make annually 1,200,000 or 1,400,000 pairs of shoes, valued at 1,000,000 dollars. The women of Lynn earn sixty thousand dollars a-year by hinding shoes. binding shoes .- French paper.

REFORM IN SCOTLAND—IMPORTANT TO THE LADIES.—The fair sex are more deeply interested in the extension of the elective suf-THE LADIES.—The fair sex are more deeply interested in the extension of the elective suffrage to all housekeepers than they at present imagine. Few bachelors, except they be old ones, keep household establishments, preferring to roost with some quiet domestic family or with their relations. But if the elective franchise were extended to all housekeepers, how much more numerous would they become! We should then not only have old bachelors taking upon themselves the cares of housekeeping, but we should see every young aspirant for a vote endeavouring to keep a house of his own. Now, the ladies know better than we can tell them, that "it is not good for man to be alone." The consequence would most certainly be, that the old bachelor would associate a female with him in the cares of housekeeping, whilst our young men would scarcely dream of passing their lives in a "state of single blessedness" within the four walls of a house. Innumerable marriages would therefore follow the extension of the right of voting to house holders; the morose bachelor would become in his old age an uxorious husband, and the youth would make himself an agreeable companion for life to some lovely fair one. In short, the moment they become politically free, they would become matrimonially bondsmen!—

MOLD CANDLES. Edinburgh paper.

Brigs vs. Schooners.—A writer in the Washington Telegraph, who says it has been his fortune, within the past 20 years, to serve in the National Navy, on board vessels of every class, rate, and rig, condemns the use of schooners as vessels of war, and recommends the introduction of brigs, as decidedly preferable. He thinks the schooner-lig a bad one for vessels above 120 tons.

thinks the schooner-rig a bad one for vessels above 120 tons.

'A well fought gun brig would whip two schooners of her own weight, in less time than she could dismantle another brig of her own metal. In action, it requires all hands to work a schooner, if indeed she work at all, with her canvass necessarily reduced; whereas the sail trimmers, few in number and easily spixed from the guns, will bog a brig about like a top. The only possible advantage that a schooner can have over a square rigged vessel, is in turning to windward in a narrow channel—and this superiority is rather based on theory than found in practice. Six cases in soven, all other cases being equal, the difference of time is found in favor of the square rigged-vessel."

TURKIES.—The first of these fowls, called by the English turkies, and by the French poules d'Indes, were said to have been brought from Mexico, and were, in the year 1570, served up as a great rarity at the nuptial feast of King Charles IX. of France.
