As Hiram Sees It

"There's a black man on one of them three craft," says I to the town feller, pointing at the patch of moonlight on Long Reach. "That" says he, "is the ghost of the first colored man that ever set foot in Noo Brunswick. That was two hundred and twenty year ago. He was from Barbadoes and had been took prisoner by the Indians an' brought to the Saint John river. When Colonel Hawthorne an' old Ben Church was comin' down after their failure to capture Villebon's fort at Nashwaak—where they held eight weeks last night an' five officers an' twelve wounded soldiers to one Frenchman killed an' two wounded. They stopped opposite Oromocto an' burnt a Frenchman's farm buildin' destroyed his crops an' carried off the colored feller. The owner of the place was Mathieu d'Amours—an' he was up at Nashwaak. He caught cold from exposure durin' the siege an' died soon afterwards. He owned all the land between Jimsag an' the Nashwaak—two leagues deep on each side of the river. The colored feller worked for him—an' that was his ghost we just seen in the moonlight on the river. He was goin' back to Barbadoes."

Mock Trial To Be Held This Evening

A mock trial, open to the public, is to be held by the students of the law school of the University of New Brunswick in the county court rooms of the Court House this evening, commencing at 8 o'clock. A local barrister will preside and act as judge for the trial. The case is sufficiently complicated to give opportunity for the students to display their legal knowledge and their skill in handling arguments.

Last year the students conducted one mock trial that proved a very popular feature in the coming season they are planning to put on a series of these events. Through the kindness of Warden B. W. Wilmore they have been permitted to use the court house for this purpose.

The case is described as concerning a "pearl in a barrel of oysters." An outline of the case is as follows: "A Pearl in a Barrel of Oysters."—A oysterer a barrel of oysters from a local fishmonger. The fishmonger procures them from an oyster merchant, B, and supplies them to A, who pays for them. Opening some of the oysters C, servant of the merchant, B, finds a valuable pearl and puts it in his pocket, intending to keep it. The pearl is claimed by the merchant, B, by the oysterer, D, and the final purchaser, A, and the servant C. In a court below judgment was given in favor of A.

Those taking part are as follows: For the complainant, counsel, Harry Hickman, B. A., and solicitor, George Fenton; for the respondent, counsel, Albany Robinson, B. A., and solicitor, Gordon King Kelley, B. A.

Play Well Presented By St. Rose's Club

With outstanding success St. Rose's Dramatic Club last night presented St. Rose's hall the comedy drama "The End of the Road." A strong cast of players showed its keen appreciation of the admirable presentation by hearty applause. The club has achieved many successes in dramatic presentations but last night it added a special triumph to its achievements. A. B. Richards, president of the club, and the members of the staff for last night's production included: Director J. J. O'Toole, stage manager and scenic artist, A. J. Quigg, and the electrician, M. J. Donovan.

Those taking part were: J. B. Richards, J. J. O'Toole, C. B. Quinlan, L. P. Upton, Miss Ely, O'Toole, William Quigg, Miss Josephine Viger, Angus deRoche, Miss Marguerite Duplissie, A. J. Quigg and J. E. Fitzgerald. The play has many thrilling moments and demands much clever acting, but it received most realistic portrayal at the hands of the St. Rose's amateurs, and the staging was exceptionally well done.

Between the acts there were very pleasing specialties given in a program that had been arranged by Miss Marguerite Duplissie.

The specialties included songs by Miss Margaret Callahan and a solo by Miss Josephine Viger with Mrs. J. J. O'Toole as accompanist and dancing numbers by the Ellwood Brothers.

Miss Walde Heads Bluebirds Club

The Bluebirds Club, of St. David's church, held its opening meeting of the season last night at the home of Mrs. Hugh Miller, 68 Queen street, with 12 members present and Miss Edith Walde, president, in the chair. Plans were made for the activities of the coming season, which it was expected would be both busy and successful. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Miss Edith Walde; vice-president, Mrs. Malcolm MacGowan; secretary, Miss Gladys Drake; assistant secretary, Miss Gladys Smith; treasurer, Miss Janet Tracey, and assistant treasurer, Miss Florence Rayner.
