FIRST EDITION. NOW HEADED FOR SEA.

THE FUGITIVE THOUGHT TO BE ALIVE.

And believed to have left Montreal by Steamer-Attempt will be made to intercept the boat.

Montreal, Que., July 22.—The latest reports regarding the fugitive who is thought to be Frank Almy, who murdered Christiana Warden at Hanover, N. H., is that he shipped on one of the cable boats of the Allan line this morning at 4 o'clock.

Telegrams has been sent ahead, and an attempt will be made to intercept the boat at the mouth of the St. Lawrence river.

It seems practically certain that the man whom the officers have traced from Vermont was in town at midnight.

A fellow who answers the murderer's description was discovered trying to slow himself away on the Paris of the Allan line last evening. He had found a convenient spot, pulled off his coat and put it under his head, and was found sprung up and cried: "You don't look me up!"

He gave one leap and landed on the wharf.

Later he was discovered prowling about the wharves. She was loading with cattle, and as she sailed at 4 o'clock this morning, and he was not seen after her departure, it is thought he may have succeeded in obtaining a passage.

The Montreal police are quite confident that this is a good clue, and have vowed to have all the outgoing steamers examined as they pass Quebec, or if not there at Fort St. John.

Since the fact became known that the fugitive thought to be Almy had reached Montreal this city has been the scene of the greatest activity. Sheriff Corning of Hanover, accompanied by High Constable Hiram Fox, of Sherbrooke, reached this city at 12 o'clock. They immediately reported to the chief of police, and Chief Detective Cullen and Detective Robinson joined them from across the line.

Chief Detective Cullen went on to the Grand Trunk railroad on a line to get general information, while Detective Robinson and Sheriff Corning went all along the river front. They found that less than four boats had left Montreal since the time of the much wanted man's arrival here Monday noon. There was no clue to connect him with any of them.

Stewart Baldwin of the Parisian came to the hotel St. Lawrence Hotel, and answered Almy's description. He had tried to stow himself away the night before.

But there were other searchers. Chief John A. Groves of the Canadian secret service, had been informed by wire from Richmond by Sheriff Miles, and he had taken him to the station at 12 o'clock.

He sent out his force of secret service detectives, and covered every part of the city.

"If he is here, we shall find him," Mr. Groves said to the Herald representative. "If he has not left the city his arrest is a foregone conclusion."

Chief Groves asked for a complete story of the case up to date, and the evidence that the man whose name he had in the newspaper had passed from Vermont to the murderer, Frank A. Almy.

"The only chance for any identity," he said after learning the facts, "is between the time when he was seen near Orest Falls and the appearance of the fellow who reached Montreal at West Point. There is no doubt in my mind that the man who hid the live man Gilman is the one who arrived in this city at noon on Monday."

One of the secret service men brought in a story that promised well. He said that when he met one of the men in the square had been a fellow who answered Almy's description looking for work. He was directed to a millman's and said the fellow would gladly go on a farm, as the work was hard, and the crew was dropped.

The Herald reporter met the 7:30 train from "the States" in its arrival in Montreal to-night. It was in charge of Conductor Fumyode and Engineer Ferguson, who brought the man supposed to be Almy to this city.

The passenger in the car, who "wore a felt hat, black coat and vest and light pantaloons. He had a light mustache and four day's growth on beard."

In short, his description corresponded to what has been given of Almy.

"Did you speak with him?" was asked.

"Not until the train was leaving Richmond. He had barely time to get on, and I said to him: 'Here, this train is four minutes late in getting away, and you are not ready to go now.' I jumped off to get my ticket," he exclaimed. I thought his answer was not very good, but it might have been his hurry to get on board."

"Did you have any talk with him when you came to take up his ticket for Montreal?"

"Not a word. I did not have any idea he was, and so said no special attention to him."

Engineer Ferguson, who had more talk with him than any one else, said: "When we arrived in Richmond this man ran up to the engine and said: 'I have no money, and would like to ride on the engine to Montreal. I have walked 60 miles within two days.' 'You can't do that,' said I. 'But I'll give you a good watch.' 'That won't do the station agent, perhaps, will fix you up.' 'When did you see him after the train left Richmond?'

"On the arrival of the train in Montreal. He came up to the engine and said: 'How am I to get my watch? What is the name of the agent here?' 'I gave it to him, and he said he would send his brother after it.' 'What nationality should you think he was?'"

FIRST EDITION.

"I should say he was a Frenchman. He could not speak English well, but I talked to him and he understood it all right."

Those views as to his nationality cannot but raise a doubt as to the fugitive being Almy.

Sheriff Corning says Almy understood French and could speak it well. Sheriff Miles says that, while several of the people who have seen that man for him said there was some peculiarity in his speech, all agreed that he spoke good English, and that is what Station Agent Marshall told the Herald reporter this morning.

If all other facts supported the description, the opinion of a man who saw as much of him as did the engineer would not upset the identity. It cannot, however, fall to notice that the man who was followed from Montreal, and who was possibly before daylight, the scar on the wrist observed by Caper at Sherbrooke, and Almy had such a scar. The man who was trying to steal the watch, and who was followed from Montreal, and who was possibly before daylight, the scar on the wrist observed by Caper at Sherbrooke, and Almy had such a scar.
