

VIENNA DOCTOR FINDS SECRET OF KEEPING YOUNG

Old Man Who Took His Cure Claims to Feel Like a Boy.

(Copyright, 1920 by Cross-Atlantic.) Berlin, Oct. 1.—Herr Eugen Steinhilber, Professor of Biology in Vienna University, whose remarkable claim to the discovery of the secret of youth has been announced, has published here a brochure explaining its theory and the results of his investigations. As long ago as December, 1912, the professor developed the idea of rejuvenation, and began experiments.

An Old Man's Case.

The most interesting of the first series was an old man of 71, who gives the following account reproduced in Steinhilber's book: "Soon after the operation, my appetite began to increase to such a degree that I could hardly satisfy it. While before the operation I was plunged in mental depression; now a few months afterward again I feel the joy of life. My appearance is again fresh and firm, my eyes, I am exceptionally bright. People meeting me for the first time take me to be about sixty, and refuse to believe I am really 71. Formerly, when I walked quickly or ascended a hill, I suffered from giddiness and loss of breath. Now, these symptoms have almost completely disappeared, and very frequently I take walks of several hours' duration.

Like a Youth.

In short, I do not in the least feel like a man who has entered the period of old age. It strikes me as one sign of increased vigor—that I have to visit the barber every week and have my hair and beard cut. My hands, which formerly trembled, are now quite steady, and able to perform the most delicate manipulations. For women, the necessary operation was more difficult. But Steinhilber made several experiments, of which he says: "In cases of women, about fifty years of age, striking changes in outward appearance were noticeable. Weariness and weakness disappeared. Several such patients took spontaneously a youthful and energetic demeanor, and this was reflected psychologically in an increase in joy of living."

CEREMONY OF KEYS PICTURESQUE AFFAIR

London, Oct. 1.—Few Americans who have visited the Tower of London have ever witnessed the ceremony of the keys, though it has taken place regularly for many centuries. The yeoman porter, with an escort of guards, still nightly looks the gates. Behind him still walks a variety of two pence a night to carry the keys and, broad daylight or no, follows the bugler with the lantern. "Hark, who comes there?" demands the sentry. "The keys," replies the yeoman porter. "Whose keys?" asks the sentry. "King George's keys," is the answer. At the end of the ceremony the yeoman porter takes off his hat and says "God preserve King George," and guard and escort reply, "Amen." Then the band or drums and fife play "God Save the King" and buglers sound the "Last Post."

SPAIN'S KING HUNTS CHAMOIS HIGH UP HILLS

No Exertion Too Great for King Alfonso When on the Chase.

(The Associated Press.) Santander, Spain, Oct. 1.—No fatigue or physical effort is too great for King Alfonso when he decides to go hunting the Chamois in the Pyrenees de Europa, as he did this year in August after attending the horse races and personally steering his yacht to victory in the regatta at San Sebastian. This time, as an exception, he was accompanied by a number of women, who love hunting and who are connected by family ties with the royal house, as well as by some of his personal sporting friends. The party included the Queen, Princess Alice of Albany, the Infanta Luisa, Infanta Carlota, Prince and Princess de Bourbon, Lord Athlone, the Marquis and Marchioness de Villavieja, the Marquis and Marchioness de Villavieja de Asturias, Luis de Bustamante and a number of court functionaries of high rank. The central point of the hunting is Pena Vieja, right in the heart of the Pico, and to reach the royal hunting box a very trying tree or four hours' horseback ride is necessary. The distance from Camaleño, where the party mounts, is only twelve miles but the ascent is sharp all the way and at places great care has to be taken in passing along narrow paths looking over abrupt precipices.

High up Hill. The site of the hunting box is Llorona, at a height of 8,450 feet above sea level and here has been built a miniature palace containing many modern comforts. At night it is always cold at this height and many of the mountain peaks are covered with eternal snow. Even during the day cool winds are constant. Activity is the watchword during the King's short stay. Everybody must have breakfasted and be ready to start at seven in the morning for the higher peaks where the Chamois is found. All the hunters are provided with ropes in case of danger in passing the deep precipices, on the edges of which the Chamois generally is found. Great agility is requisite once the game has been marked. The Small animals are usually, noticed at a long distance like small black dots leaping from point to point. Shooting has to be extremely accurate and as a rule many shots are expended as he dashes headlong among the rocks. Sometimes a mountain mist arises and then shooting is almost useless while it causes the hunters to separate and oftentimes to get lost in the mountains, where parties of miners, who are numerous in the district, search for them. However, Alfonso was this year lucky as regards weather and each day the royal party brought back to the hunting box on the backs of donkeys a considerable bag of game. Notwithstanding the strenuousness of the day's work, the King was always ready the following morning to start out again at an early hour sometimes, however, leaving various members of the party behind. Thirteen is always an unlucky number to have at a table—when there is only dinner for twelve.
