$20,000 FIRE AT NOME

Nome, Jan. 31.—Fire which broke out in the Dexter building about 4:15 this morning destroyed it, as well as the Warwick and Bodega buildings on the north side of Front street. The total loss will probably amount to $20,000.

How the fire originated is shrouded in more or less mystery. Only one person was in the Dexter building at the time. This was Cecil Barcroft, who with George Hoxsie occupied two rooms on the second floor at the rear of the building. Barcroft retired about one o'clock and was awakened by the smoke which filled the room.
Hastily jumping out of bed and without waiting to don any clothing he made his way along the corridor and down the stairs to Front street amid the stifling smoke and flames.

The morning was intensely cold.
The thermometer at the fire engine house registered 42 below, and consequently 10 or 15 minutes delay was occasioned in turning on water. In the meantime the flames had spread to the Warwick building adjoining the Dexter, and were leaping like mad, and the burning sparks, fanned by the wind, which is always created by a fire, were scattered far and wide.

The Hunter building, separated from the Dexter by a narrow alley, was in imminent danger, but a number of the firemen, among whom were C. R. Staples, N. J. Nicholson and George H. Chapman climbed to the roof of the building, the hose was dragged up by means of a rope and soon a stream of salt water was playing all around. The building was saved.

The first floor of the Warwick building was used as a lodge and club room by Nome Aerie, No. 75, F. O.
E. They lost everything, including furniture, paraphernalia, a piano, in short everything that the rooms contained, and their loss will be quite heavy.

The second story of the Bodega was used as a lodging house, Miss Espen being the proprietress. She lost everything except her trunks. The building and contents were owned by R. J. Park, who is now on the outside. The ground floor was not occupied.

John H. Barton who was sleeping in a room upstairs in the Warwick, had a narrow escape for his life. He was compelled to make a jump of many feet through the smoke and flames in order to reach the street, which he did clad only in his night clothes. W. C. Josh, who also occupied a room in the same building, lost everything except the clothes he managed to get on before escaping from the building.

Developments go to show that the fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin. L. N. Botts, captain of the chemical engine, says that the fire from the Warwick met the fire from the Dexter, both hallways being on fire when the chemical arrived, a few seconds after the alarm was turned in. He decried the flames in the hallway of the Dexter, but it was impossible to check them in the Warwick.

This is also the opinion of J. H.
Barton, who was sleeping in the Warwick, as, when he emerged from his room, he found a big hole burning in the corridor, across which he was forced to jump while the flames shot upward.

The Dexter and Warwick buildings were owned by C. E. Hoxsie, the Bodega by R. J. Park. The Bodega and Warwick were built in 1900; the Dexter was among the first substantial buildings erected in Nome, having been built in 1899. The two latter were corrugated iron buildings, and to this fact and the heavy snow covering is due the fact that the flames were kept so long confined inside the building. However, had there been a heavy wind, the result might have been exceedingly disastrous. The losses are approximately as follows:

Dexter building and Warwick building	$12,000
Nome Aerie, F. O. E.	1,600
Bodega	5,000
H. O. Butler, damage to stock	250
A. C. Schow, fixtures	800

North Pole Bakery 100
The Hunter 100
Mrs. Dobbelaar 50

SUN BUSINESS METHODS.

Tried to Secure Advertisement From Eagle Firm and Attacks Nugget for Accepting the Same—How Illegitimate Journalism is Practiced by Dawson Morning Joke.

During the past ten days the Sun, otherwise known as the Morning Joke, has kept up an intermittent attack upon the Nugget because this paper following out business principles has accepted an advertisement for a commercial house located at Eagle, Alaska.

Time and again the Sun has called attention to the advertisement running in the Nugget, endeavoring to make the merchants of Dawson believe that this paper was working in favor of Eagle and against local houses. No attention was paid to the silly talk of the Sun but certain developments in the matter have taken place which it appears in view of all the circumstances should be given to the public.

The facts in the case are that the Sun sought to secure the identical advertisement in question, even going to the expense of telegraphing to Eagle. Messrs Peoples & Woodruff the enterprising Eagle merchants preferred a better advertising medium to the Sun and therefore placed their order with the Nugget.

In response to a query from that firm as to the Sun's advertising rates the following wire was forwarded:

"Dawson, Y. T.,
March 16, 1903.
"People & Woodruff,
"Eagle."
"Fifteen dollars per inch per month. Wire amount you desire."
"YUKON SUN."

Peoples & Woodruff could not see their way clear to do any business with the Sun hence the attack of that sheet, directed both at the Eagle merchants and the Nugget.

The telegram in question came to the Nugget enclosed with the following letter which explains the animus of the Sun's action very clearly.
The letter reads:
