TO DISCUSS ECONOMICS

A Discussion Circle Organized Under the Auspices of the Regina Trades and Labor Council—Honore J. Jaxon
Delivers Address.

Sunday afternoon the Regina chapter of the "Producers' Social and Economic Discussion Circle" movement was formally launched at Trades Hall, under the auspices of the Regina Trades and Labor Council.

The broad invitation issued by the Council had evidently been accepted as in good faith, by the citizens at large and the meeting was attended by a good sprinkling of representatives of the business and capitalist class, who were accorded a fair hearing for the expression of their views and were evidently well pleased with the new departure.

On invitation of the Council, Honore J. Jaxon opened the discussion with an address on "The Struggle of Life under Western Conditions" his remarks being in continuation and completion of his public lecture of last Wednesday evening.

Mr. Jaxon pointed out that the greatest difficulties in life encountered in the northwest arose, not from any lack of bounty in nature, but from the fact that under the general policy of administration by the east, the future of our children was in reality being seriously compromised—the actual plunder realized from this process constituting only a small percentage of the material cost of the damage done as a result of handling northwestern affairs from the view-point of the interest of eastern financiers, manufacturers and merchants, rather than from that of the producing class of the northwest. For example, the railroads of the northwest had been built at tenfold their actual cost, and at the expense of northwest settlers, since the land grants had to be paid for by the settler class, but had been located on lines calculated primarily to turn northwestern trade through eastern ports and subject northwesterners indirectly to eastern tribute gatherers; and the necessity of getting northwestern products and supplies in and out at the lowest possible cost of transportation had been almost completely lost sight of, as evidenced by the neglect of the Hudson Bay route for which the speaker and his associates in the so-called "rebellion" of 1885 had been clamoring a full quarter of a century ago.

In like manner, the northwest had been subjected to danger of internal dissension by splitting it up into a number of provinces, dominated by different sets of officials, in similar disregard of the principle laid down in 1885 by the Metis Bill of Rights—that "lines of political division should be determined by identity of industrial interests."

In an analysis of the British North America Act, Mr. Jaxon showed that this policy had been pursued in direct violation of conditions of trusteeship imposed by Great Britain; and prophesied that when the northwest "came of age" an accounting would be demanded.
As to the placing of the responsibility, he pointed out that as a matter of fact, each succeeding cabinet in power at Ottawa found itself in peril of dismissal from office by the votes, not of a non-partisan, but of a "bi-partisan" brigade of representatives elected mainly from eastern constituencies, but through capitalist influence; the result being that more than one able and honest statesman found himself unable to unite confident tenure of office with the carrying out of his real ideas and principles.

This simply proved that Canada, like all other countries under the present system, was still under the rule not of the whole people, but of the capitalist class; and it further proved that the mission of saving the people from this condition and from the degeneracy thereof, was distinctly the province of the working class. The present discussion circle movement was therefore a move in the right direction; but it must be held strictly to the finding out of the truth, and must be kept free from ring rule or partisan control. Absolute democracy and fair play must be its watch-words.

Mr. Jaxon's remarks were followed by an extended and animated debate, which argued well for the vitality and usefulness of the new departure.
A good collection was taken up for the purpose of starting a library of Economic Literature.

GERMANY WANTS FIRMER FOOTHOLD.

Canada As a Field For German Commercial Enterprise.

London, July 20.—A Berlin despatch states that Germany is striving might and main to secure a firmer commercial foothold in Canada. The efforts of the German government are being backed up with the greatest enthusiasm by merchants and commercial magnates and scarcely a day passes without the attention of traders and exporters being drawn through the Press to Canada as a field for German enterprises.

The Berliner Lokal Anzeiger will depart in August its naval correspondent, Captain Von Pustau to the Dominion to make an exhaustive tour and write a series of articles. Von Pustau will also endeavor to interview Canadian statesmen in order to bring their notice to the recently formed German-Canadian economical league and will question them as to the prospects for better commercial relations in future.

IMMEDIATE STEPS FOR EARLY CLOSING.

Fight to the Death Over the By-Law.

Montreal, July 20.—The city council resolved yesterday by a three quarters majority to take immediate steps to enforce the long disputed early closing by-law, and advertisements to this effect will be published in the city papers with notice that the by-law goes into effect and will be enforced the following day.
The by-law orders that all shops and stores in the city be closed every Wednesday and Thursday night at seven o'clock, not to be opened until five o'clock the following morning. The exception is made in the case of saloons, cigar, fruit and ice cream stores, etc. The by-law was originally passed three years ago and met with much opposition from the store keepers. It has been fought through the courts since then, and the present action is based upon a decision of the Supreme Court that such action is within the city power. It is expected that the fight will now be carried to the Privy Council.
