The colors displayed for winter wearing, both in gowns and hats, are sufficiently beautiful to quite turn the head of the majority of women. Never were there so many or so absolutely ravishing studes of one single color as are seen this season. Take, for example, the red tints. One has her choice of the entire gamut of shades, from

COSTUME OF JACQUEMINOT BROADCLOTH. the richest and deepest dregs of wine down to the palest of the pastel color ings. Bordeaux is a favorite, and so is jacqueminot, and the different shades of old rose are a delight to the eye.

One fashion authority has declared that at least three shades of the same color should appear on a smart gown if its wearer would have the satisfaction of knowing that it was entirely as it should be. Or if but two shades are chosen, surely there must be a third coloring introduced somewherethe eternal "touch of black" if nothing else. This rule of three is said to apply to millinery as well as dressmaking, and certainly some of the early models prove the truth of the statement. The pelerine sleeve is destined to play an important role in the picture-like effect.

The latest reports from the other side all agree on the sloping shoulder effect both for street and house costumes. Some of the newest of the French models suggest old time portraits with their graceful fichu lines. This long shoulder effect is often achieved by means of eleverly arranged trimmings, and again an epaulet or other similar shoulder expansion is often cut as a part of the bodice itself. All sorts of devices for lengthening the shoulder line will be resorted to as the season advances, and this is one of the features which the far sighted woman should take up cautiously, as there is Aways the possibility of such an effect being run to the ground in a few months.

Most of the new gowns have skirts that are plaited in one way or another—side, sun, accordion or box—and the day of the gathered skirt seems to be gone. You do not see those full round skirts which were the rage only so very recently. In nearly every instance they are kilted, knifed, accordion plaited or laid in little side plaits in groups of three or four. The costume illustrated is of jacqueminot broadclot. The skirt is a seven gored model, with plaits on each seam. The jacket is hip length and trimmed about the neck with oxidized silver soutache on bands of deeper red velvet.
