

Can Dyspepsia be Cured.

This is a question often asked by those that suffer from the effects of this disease. The question usually arises after the miserable sufferer has tried nearly all the remedies recommended and has failed to derive any permanent relief from them or from physicians. To such the testimony of a well-known and highly respectable young man of Pictou may be of interest.

Mr. Wm. Adamson, under date of March 15th, 1892, writes—"I am very glad to add my testimony to the marvellous efficiency of your St Lawrence Dyspepsia Powders and Bitters. Mine was a very bad case of dyspepsia and though I had tried nearly all the popular remedies recommended or guaranteed as cures for that disease, I received little or no benefit and almost began to think there was no cure for me.

It was then that I was induced to give your remedies a trial though I must confess that I had but little faith that they would benefit me. But the results were wonderful. The wretched feeling that only those who have experienced the agonies of dyspepsia can know, completely left me after using but two packages of St Lawrence Dyspepsia and now after finishing a package of St Lawrence Bitters I consider myself completely cured. I can now eat almost anything in the hope of food and hardly know that I have a stomach."

A Wise Minister.

The minister of a western church not long ago preached a sermon on card playing and at its close remarked:

"Will the brethren now in the house who know how to play poker please hold up their hands?"

He waited a minute and not a hand went up.

"I am very much obliged," he said then, "but I did not think so many of you know how."

There was a sensation in the church but the preacher concluded the service quietly and afterwards a committee waited on him.

"We come to ask you what you mean by saying we all know how to play poker, when in response to your inquiry not one of us responded," said the spokesman, hotly.

The preacher laughed soothingly. "Don't let your tempers get the better of you, brethren," he replied; "any man who knows how to play poker isn't going to show his hand until he is forced to, and you know it as well as I do."

The committee apologized and reported to the other members and the preacher's salary was raised.

Mrs. Millon's Ride.

When Mrs. Millon goes to ride she travels forth in state.

Her horses, full of fire and pride, go prancing from the gate;

But all the beauties of the day she views with languid eye.

Her flesh in woman's wastes away, her voice is but a sigh.

For Mrs. Millon is in an advanced stage of catarrh, and all the luxuries that wealth can buy fail to give her comfort. She envies her rosy waiting-maid, and would give all her riches for that young woman's pure breath and blooming health. Now, if some true and disinterested friend would advise Mrs. Millon of the wonderful merits of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, she would learn that her case is not past help. $500 reward is offered by the manufacturer for a case of catarrh in the head which they cannot cure.

The house where Beethoven wrote his Ninth Symphony is still standing in Baden and is now occupied by an establishment of seamstresses. An old woman, who for several years waited on the great musician at this very house, is living, and recently told a company of German artists that none of Beethoven's portraits were like him, for he looked much fiercer and savage like, because he never troubled about brushing his hair. She called her old master an "uncouth, crazy musician."

Dr. William's Pink Pills are a specific for troubles arising from overwork, mental worry, or excess of any nature. G. A. Pelletier, Montreal, writes—"I am more than pleased with the results of the use of your Dr. William's Pink Pills. I was suffering from the loss of mental faculties, and they have completely restored me. Sold by all dealers, or post-paid on receipt of 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50. Address Dr. William, Med. Co., Brookville, Ont., or Morristown, N. Y.

Giant is the lowest rock in the earth's crust. It is the bed rock of the world. It shows no evidence of animal or vegetable life. It is from two to ten times as thick as the united thickness of all the other rocks. It is the parent rock, from which all other rocks have been either directly or indirectly derived.

Does Prohibition Prohibit?

The following extracts are from an article in the Union Signal, the official organ of the W. C. T. U., on the above subject:

General Dow, Mrs. Stevens and others went with us to the city hall to see the "gilling," as it is called; a unique ceremony for which preparations had been made for several months, as it had been known that Laly Henry Somerset was coming to behold this remarkable operation that the night take the story home to England and do good thereby. The sheriff and his two faithful deputies were on hand to show how it is done. They had saved all the liquor seized since December last, which did not present a formidable array, but was most interesting as revealing the devices of the smugglers, who still try to turn a dishonest penny by the violation of law. Some of the liquor had been packed into small bottles, intermingled with sawdust, and encased in a barrel, marked "Sugar." Some had been marked "Flour," others "Butter," others "Eggs," but the sheriff told us that an expert could very soon tell by the sound when these barrels were rolled, and by other unmistakable symptoms, that the superspies were fraudulent. He said that, aside from what they call "pocket peddling," the traffic was practically stamped out, that brewers found it did not pay, on account of the bulk of their material, to bring it in, and the traffic was so dangerous that all but the lowest now gave it "a wide berth."

It was most interesting to see Neal Dow with a jug of old rye in hand as he stood up beside the bickled aperture through which the liquor is sent gurgling into the sewers of the city where it can do no injury, and listen to his ringing "Here goes!" as he turned the jug right side up which, when it has such contents, must be always upside down. By special request Lady Henry Somerset and others of us inspect bottles, decanters and jugs. Anna Gordon—who is a world's super-nutrient stands at the head of well-nigh 300,000 children—taking special pleasure in turning "the cradle," has into its natural home, seated by the sheriff's little grandson, two years old, who entered into the sport with zest.

Whoever is flagging in zeal or lacking in faith would do well to take a trip to Maine and get his spiritual strength renewed. Let him sit down with Neal Dow in his beautiful home where he has lived and toiled for sixty-two years, in the library in which he wrote the original Maine law, which, without a charge of phrase, was adopted in 1851 and with but two years interval has been the law-strengthened and improved by experience, up to this time. Let him hear say a lay to heart the cheery tones of prohibition's father, who, at nearly ninety years of age still says, "It is letter-further on," and hates no jot of heat or hope. Let him listen while Gen. Neal Dow, who fought the battles of his country and carries wounds received in that great argument of bayonets, describes the infinitely superior value of ballots to bayonets and recites the faith that is within him that only through politics and law can the American Republic free itself from complexity with that dice-casting and tender sullen brains of its best and brightest sons. Let him sit down at the table in that consecrated home and looking around him see how a pure, great life reaps its reward even here.

The prohibition commission, as it is undoubtedly, can do little more than tabulate already well known facts. But perhaps the old facts in new form may help to arouse the temperance electors to a sense of the importance of beginning at the beginning, by sending only prohibitionists to Parliament. Rev. W. A. McKay of Woodstock, relates that a friend of his once said to the late Sir John A. Macdonald:—"Sir John, when are you going to give us Prohibition?" Sir John—"When ever you want it." But we want it now," said my friend. Sir John—"Then say so." But how are we to say it?" was the query of my friend, Sir John—By sending prohibitionists to Parliament." And that on another occasion, replying to a deputation of liquor-sellers, Sir John said, "Gentlemen, don't abuse the churches or stir up their hostility for us," and the churches do their duty, your days are numbered." No comment is required.

An Irishman had a correct appreciation of the fitness of things, who, having applied for a license to sell liquor, and being required to prove a good moral character, said:—"Yes Honor, I don't see the necessity of a good moral character to sell whiskey."
