

THE HERALD

VOL. V., NO. 3.

FREDERICTON, N. B., SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1893.

$1.00 PER YEAR

HOTELS.

QUEEN HOTEL,

Queen Street, Fredericton, N. B.

THIS HOTEL has been REBUILT AND PAINTED IN THE MOST ATTRACTIVE STYLE. AN ELEGANT GENTLEMEN'S PARLOR, OFFICE and BEAUTIFUL DECK. ATTACHED DINING ROOM on Ground Floor. REFRESHMENT ROOM on NEW FLOOR throughout. LARGE and AIRY BEDROOMS. COMMODIOUS BATH ROOMS and CLOSETS on each floor and is capable of accommodating ONE HUNDRED GUESTS. It is rapidly growing in popular favor, and is today one of the LEADING, as well as the MOST COMFORTABLE HOTELS IN THE PROVINCE. The Table is always supplied with every delicacy available. The Cooking is slightly commended, and the Staff of Attendants are ever ready to oblige. There are two of the largest and most conveniently situated BATH ROOMS in Canada, having steam entrances and also connecting with Hotel OFFICE. CARRIAGES of every style are to be had at the LIVERY STABLES of the Proprietor, immediately adjacent to the Hotel. The "QUEEN" is centrally located, directly opposite to the Steamboat and Gibson Ferry Landings, and within minutes' walk of the County Registrar's Office and Cathedral. A FIRST-CLASS BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION.

HEALTH FOR ALL!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

PURIFY THE BLOOD, correct all Disorders of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys and Bowels. They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the Aged they are peculiar.

THE OINTMENT is an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is also a cure for Rheumatism. For Disorders of the Chest it has no equal.

FOR SORE THROATS, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Affections of the Throat and Lungs, it is a sure and safe remedy.

Manufactured only at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 533, NEW OXFORD STREET, (late 533, OXFORD STREET), LONDON, and are sold at 1s. 10d., 2s., 4s., 6s., 11s., 22s., and 28s. each Box or Pot and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

Purchasers should look to the label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

THE AMERICAN

$8 DOLLAR $8

Typewriter.

THIS is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price, for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a Typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity, that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes Capitals, small letters, figures and marks, 71 in all. Writes just like a $100 machine. No shift keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct. Prints on flat surface. Writing always in sight. Corrections and insertions easily made. Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches.

Easy to understand, learned in five minutes. Weighs only four pounds, most portable. Compact, takes up but little room. Built solid and simple, can't get out of order. Capital and lower-case keyboard alike, easily mastered. More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work. Takes good letter press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine and are glad to answer all enquiries for further information.

A. S. MURRAY,

Special Agent, Fredericton, N. B.

Just Received and in Stock.

Rodgers' celebrated Table Cutlery; Table and Tea Knives; Carvers, Ham Slicers and Bread Knives; Steak and Butcher Knives.

Also other good makes of Cutlery in the above.

Table Cutlery. Plated Goods.

We have added to our already large assortment of CHRISTMAS GOODS a very fine line of CELLULOID ARTICLES. They are of unique design, and are selling very rapidly. It is impossible to enumerate all we have, but we extend a cordial invitation to ALL to call and examine our stock.

W. H. CARTEN, Druggist and Apothecary, CORNER QUEEN and CARLETON STS. FREDERICTON, N. B.

Electro Plated Table and Tea Knives; Table and Tea Spoons; Table and Dessert Forks; Pickle Forks; Butter Knives, etc.

My stock in the above line is full and complete, and price lower than ever.

It would be well for intending purchasers to give me a call and look over my stock before purchasing elsewhere.

JAMES S. NEILL.

FREE!

FREE!

IT will not cost you anything to read this, or to call and see what nice things they have at the

Furniture Store

—OF—

Willard Kitchen & Co.

—OF—

Lots of Durable and Pretty Things

—FOR—

Christmas Presents.

2 doors above People's Bank.

INSTANT CROCKERY MENDER.

Mends Solid as a Rock.

THIS preparation will mend anything that is broken, and will hold like iron. It is used by the best workmen in the world. It is used by the best workmen in the world. It is used by the best workmen in the world.

Next below C. P. R. OFFICE.

WESLEY VANWART,

Barrister.

Office: Queen Street.

OPPOSITE NORMAL SCHOOL.

FREDERICTON, May 6th, 1893.

SHOVELS.

Just received 15 Bundles Steel Shovels long and short handles. R. CHESTNUT & SONS.

Roofing Paper.

100 ROLLS Tinned Roofing Paper; 100 Rolls 100 ROLLS Tinned Roofing Paper; 3 casks Roofing pitch. Just to hand. R. CHESTNUT & SONS.

STORY OF A GOLD DOLLAR.

The Postmistress's Keepsake Led to the Detection of Abner Thorne.

Abner D. Thorne, Portland, Me., in confessing that he shot young Whittman on the night of the fatal encounter at Paris Hill, shows himself one of the most dangerous criminals that a community ever harbored. Outwardly a quiet, industrious young man, he was secretly carrying on a most extensive system of petty burglary. He did it so successfully, moreover, that had it not been for the quick intuition of a woman's brain, he would probably be at large and unsuspected to-day.

The public has been informed by the despatches that Thorne was first held charged with the larceny of a gold dollar. Connected with that gold dollar is a story. Some years ago—very really cannot say definitely how many—there was in the writing school at Paris Hill a little girl named Jennie Hubbard. She was very industrious and apt, and carried off the honors of the school. In appreciation of her work the writing master gave to her as a prize, a gold dollar, the date of which was the year of her birth. This gold dollar became one of the most carefully cherished possessions of her girlhood.

She kept it in a little compartment in her writing desk, in which she also kept other trinkets. Sixteen years ago Miss Hubbard was appointed postmistress at Paris Hill. A few weeks ago Miss Hubbard made a curious discovery one morning, as she opened the post office. There on her table lay an unsealed and unstamped letter directed to a Main publishing house. She could not remember that she had left such a letter on her desk, and there seemed no way for it to get there. She looked at the envelope to see if it was written or printed matter, and discovered that it was a letter signed by Abner D. Thorne, and enclosing a gold dollar. Remembering her treasure in the little writing desk, she looked at this dollar and discovered it also bore the date of her birth. A desire to possess it took possession of her, and she considered whether it would be proper to put a dollar bill into the mysterious letter in place of the gold. She finally concluded that it would not be right to do so; and determined to stamp and seal the letter, and send it on its way. Abner Thorne was a poor and industrious boy towards whom all fell good will, and the postmistress concluded as she stamped the letter that its presence on her desk must be all right. It never entered her mind to connect the gold dollar in Abner Thorne's letter with her own keepsake.

Miss Hubbard thought nothing more of the matter until the day after the burglar had shot young Whittman. That day, by a curious chance, it was discovered that Abner Thorne had a greater supply of keys in his possession than a young man in his position would be expected to have, and that one of these keys was a post office key. Immediately the thought of the gold dollar flashed through Miss Hubbard's mind. She went to the writing desk, long unopened, opened it and looked for the dollar. It was gone.

By this time there was a quandy among the big wigs at Paris Hill. Thorne was suspected at last; but there seemed to be no evidence on which to hold him. While the despatch fathers basted the postmistress acted. She told the story of the gold dollar, and upon her story Thorne was arrested for the larceny of the dollar.

Then it was found that he was a dangerous burglar, equipped with keys to most of the business offices and stores in that village. Later his own confessions show him to be a murderer.

The presence of the letter containing the dollar on Miss Hubbard's desk has not been explained. It is thought that Thorne wrote it during one of his nocturnal raids on the post office, and was frightened away before he had completed it.

ALIVE WITH A BROKEN NECK.

Brooklyn doctors are much interested in the case of a man named Jenks who is in a hospital in that city with a broken neck, but in other respects is in perfect health, and they expect in a few weeks to have him convalescent. His head, however, will have to be supported by a framework of iron rods and straps for the rest of his life.

Jenks is a carpenter by trade, and before the accident was in the full vigor of manhood. He was over six feet tall, broad shouldered, and carried his fifty years lightly that few would have believed that he was over forty. On the afternoon of November 18 he was on a new house at No. 583 McDonough street, Brooklyn. He was standing on a platform only eight and a half feet high. He stepped back, one of the boards tilted, and he fell backward, striking his head. When he reached him his head was lying loose on his breast. It was at first believed that he was dead, but a faint flutter of the heart was discovered and the man was taken to the hospital.

Jenks was put on a cot and a four pound weight hung over a pulley attached to his head by a strap around the jaw. This brought the head into place, and the apparently dead man soon began to revive. In an hour he had recovered consciousness. For three days he was fed on milk, but after that he began to eat solid food. His appetite became good, and apparently no evil result remains except a soreness of the neck whenever he attempts to move his head. At first his right side was paralyzed, but it has regained its normal condition.

AN OLD ENGLISH CHRISTMAS.

Sir Roger De Coverly, after the laudable custom of his ancestor, always keeps open house at Christmas. A gentleman learned from him, says a writer in the Spectator of 1712, that he had killed eight fat hogs for this season; that he had dealt out his string very liberally among his neighbors, and that in particular he had sent a string of hogs' paddings with a pack of cards; to every poor family in the parish.

"I have often thought," says Sir Roger, "it happens very well that Christmas should fall about in the middle of winter. It is the most desolate and comfortable time of the year when the poor people would suffer very much from their poverty, and cold if they had not good cheer, warm fires and Christmas gambols to support them. I love to rejoice their poor hearts at this season and to see the whole village merry in my great hall."

"I allow a double quantity of malt to my small beer and set it a running for twelve days for every one that calls for it. I have always a piece of cold beef and a mince-pie upon the table, and am wonderfully pleased to see my tenants pass away a whole evening in playing their innocent tricks and smutting one another."

LOOTED BY ROBBERS.

Brigands go Through an Express Car and Passengers' Coaches.

The express car looted of all the money and valuables in the safe, every passenger in the coaches robbed of his purse, watch and jewelry, and a pistol held in the shoulder of Fireman "Red" Corrigan, is the story in brief of the hold up and plunder of the northbound Texas Pacific passenger train at Duval station at midnight on the 12th inst.

There were five to ten men in the banditti gang. Approaching Duval, a flag station sixteen miles north of Austin, Texas, engineer Rutledge discovered the switch was open with empty cars upon it. Just as he stopped the train two armed men ordered him and his fireman to step from the foot-board. On landing on the ground they found the selves covered with revolvers in the hands of two men. Fireman Corrigan was a little slow about obeying the command of "Throw your hands!" and the fellow who had a gun drawn down on him fired. The bullet made a wound in Corrigan's left shoulder. The firing was so quick that the robbers with revolvers in the hands of two men. Fireman Corrigan was a little slow about obeying the command of "Throw your hands!" and the fellow who had a gun drawn down on him fired. The bullet made a wound in Corrigan's left shoulder.

The firing was so quick that the robbers with revolvers in the hands of two men. Fireman Corrigan was a little slow about obeying the command of "Throw your hands!" and the fellow who had a gun drawn down on him fired. The bullet made a wound in Corrigan's left shoulder.

The firing was so quick that the robbers with revolvers in the hands of two men. Fireman Corrigan was a little slow about obeying the command of "Throw your hands!" and the fellow who had a gun drawn down on him fired. The bullet made a wound in Corrigan's left shoulder.

The firing was so quick that the robbers with revolvers in the hands of two men. Fireman Corrigan was a little slow about obeying the command of "Throw your hands!" and the fellow who had a gun drawn down on him fired. The bullet made a wound in Corrigan's left shoulder.

THE GREAT SENSATION.

That is Agitating Society in St. John—Some Espy Affairs.

The sensational suit between J. D. Shatford, now of Chicago, and his wife, who lives with her father, Charles Campbell, in St. John, for custody of the children, is attracting more public attention than any event of the kind for many years. A week ago, Mrs. Shatford presented affidavits from her father, her brother, giving reasons against placing the children under the control of their father. On Monday last, J. D. Hazen, M. P., counsel for Shatford, read twenty-five affidavits contradicting the assertions on Shatford's character, and attacking that of his wife and her father. The affidavits, the longest of which is Shatford's own, makes free with a number of well-known names. Shatford says his wife is not a good guardian for young children, because of her own indiscretions, and mentions her former infidelity with a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who swear to having watched Mrs. Shatford, and having seen her in compromising situations. Another affidavit is furnished by a society young man, named Harry Kaye, as one with whom she held clandestine meetings, while she and her husband lived together. He also says that she was too intimate with Grand Eville, a bank clerk, of Windsor, N. S., and that she was a suggestive companion of Robert Campbell, of the bank of Montreal. He submits affidavits of detective Ring and officer Jenks, who