INFLUENCES OF EDUCATION ON COMMUNITIES.

By WILLIAM RANKIN, Esq., Principal of the Classical School, Deckertown, N. J.

The intelligent traveller, standing on the mountion of Passillippo, beholds a scenery, a the whole world, he scarcely finds a parallel. At his feet westward, is epread out the archaration selection schools and the schools are the schools. rallel. At his feet westward, is spread out the enchanting vale of Neapolis, embosomed in the lovely margin of which, a spacious bay, studded with sunny isles, and half encircled by shores robed with orange groves, stretches its silvery waters till lost in the expansive Mediterranean; while eastward, and above him, rises mountain turret and towering crag, exhibiting one of Nature's most sublime and beautiful simphitheatres. Still, in the back-ground, and towering above all, with its blackened sides and everfaming crater, stands the terrible Vesuvius.

above all, with its blackened sides and everflaming crater, stands the terrible Vesuvius.

The associations that here crowd the memory of the spectator, are no less interesting than the scenery that meets his eye.

In his immediate presence stands the tomb and rest the ashes of that tongue, by which were once made vocal the hills and vales of far-famed Mantua. In the distance once there the ide of Fame advanced with nushone the isle of Fam, adorned with numerous vilas of Roman Senators, and hon-ored with the academy of Cicero. And, there too, the site of Capua, celebrated as having by its luxuriant pleasures subdued the mighty army (of the terrible Carthage nian. On the other hand, and beneath the wast fields of lava, lie, in eternal sleep, the once gay, active and magnificent cities of nce gay, active and magnificent cities of lerculaneum and Pompoii. But let our traveller now descend and traverse the streets of Nanles, and how is traverse the streets of Naples, and how is he struck in turning his eye from the glories of the works of God, to the disgrace of that human depravity, with which he is in contact. Squallid wretchedness and abject ignorance everywhere abound. Thieves and beggars by thousands crowd the streets. The traveller shudders at the thought of taking lodgings in the polluted place, and embarks on the departing ship, and finds peaceful refuge on the dark waves of the additerranean.

Select another town, which, in point of interesting location, will bear comparison with that just alluded to. Two distinguishwith that just alluded to. Two distinguished chains of mountains, from different directions, approach within a few miles of the place, and abruptly terminate as if hewn perpendicularly down, leaving a plain of several miles in extent for the site of the beautiful city of Now Haven. Here let the reflecting traveller arrive, and two miles distant from the city, stand on the summit of West Pook.
