Just Folks. By EDGAR A GUEST

THE OLD CRY

"It's the old, old cry," said he,
"We resent each change we see,
And we fancy, now we are older
And of youth we're all bereft,
That the finer things were lost
When from then to this we crossed;
That the past holds all of splendor
And there is no virtue left."

"Men in ages long ago
Saw their children overthrow
Every rule set down to guide them,
And they shook their heads and sigh-

ed;
And they murmured, looking on:
"The old glory now is gone,
The old courage is deserted,
And the old faith thrown aside."

"But a fairer world we know
Than that world of long ago,
And the children of our children
In a fairer world shall dwell;
And in spite of all our fears,
Youth shall triumph through the years,
And the glory of their courage
To their children they shall tell."

"We are older, you and I,
And we shake our heads and sigh
As our children break their fetters
And our rules of guidance flout;
But the old faith still remains,
There is good blood in their veins,
The old virtues are not falling
Nor is courage dying out."

Miraculous Escape From Death

MOTOR CAR CRASHES INTO TRAIN
BUT OCCUPANTS OF CAR ES-CAPE UNINJURED.

While proceeding from the city to Mount Pearl on Friday afternoon, Mr. Scott, the officer in charge at the Mount Pearl Wireless Station and his wife barely missed instant death.

Shortly after 3 o'clock, Mr. Scott and his wife having purchased their week's supply of groceries started for Mount Pearl Wireless Station. On nearing "Paddy Coughlan's Crossing," the car was going at a moderate speed as the Crossing there was known to be very dangerous. Mr. Scott did not hear any warning of an approaching train and before he could stop his car he had collided with the train.

SIDE ON COLLISION.

With great presence of mind Mr. Scott swerved his car to the left so that the oncoming train which was travelling at a rate of between 30 and 35 miles per hour ripped, along the side of the machine, smashing both wheels and axles and driving some of the iron work a foot or so into the ground. The train was pulled up after having travelled about fifty yards, when the crew went back and expected to find that the occupants of the car had received serious injury, they were surprised that Mr. and Mrs. Scott had suffered only a few bruises from the severe shock.

A DANGEROUS CROSSING.

Coughlan's Crossing is a very dangerous one, as coming from town it is hidden until you are with a few yards of it. The signal cannot be seen, and if the wind is in it is very difficult to hear the engineers warning. It is timely that the engineers on all trains should be cautioned to give warning blasts at all crossings.

World Leaders Might Make Peace Possible

Only by the united efforts of business men, statesmen, educationalists and journalists throughout the world to create and produce the will to peace, can there be achieved recovery and reconstruction of a thorough and abiding kind," Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, told the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in an address at its annual convention. To the same end they must work, also, the ambassador declared, to remove the desire for revenge on the other, and to show that, while accepting the ordinary competition of trade, which is a part of the natural order of things, no nation desires to take any unfair and improper advantage of the other. The subject of influence of international co-operation on trade, Sir Esme said, is one to which too little attention is perhaps paid by those who give up their time mainly to business.

International trade, which, he said, has been too often the provocation of war, should henceforth be pursued along lines which would make it rather an influence for peace.

Referring to the economic future of Russia, the ambassador declared "the great question of the future is who is going to help Russia recover and how is this to be done."

"In asking this question," he said, "I don't propose to refer to any particular political action on the part of any government. But here is a case in which international co-operation is urgently required if one of the gravest problems of the world is to be satisfactorily solved, and it is one in which I think business men of America should be particularly interested."

"Not only will Russia be, as soon as confidence has been re-established in her government, a great field for the investment of capital, but also it will be a vast field for young men of energy and brains. But it will be necessary to train such men to go there and take hold of business. Something in this direction is already being done in England. It seems to me important that other nations also should share in this work.

"As in all walks of life, so in international policy, a programme of complete isolation is impossible. For the sake of prosperity generally, it is becoming increasingly clear that all business, whether agricultural, industrial, or financial, hangs together all over the world."

Household Notes

If dandelion greens are prepared before cooking they will not be bitter taste.

Many people think spinach is when choked, chopped and served white sauce.

To prevent slipping when wearing sheer silk by a pattern, push goods on a silence cloth. If you wish vegetables to be especially tender, add the salt last. Serve sliced oranges on a mayonnaise dressing.
