Cargill's Majority in East Bruce Now Given as Ten.

The Liberals Will Demand a Recount.

Nominations in Brome, Que.—Conserva-tive Orators Who Fail to Connect.—Hon. Wilfrid Laurier to Speak in the Inter-est of M. C. Cameron.

CARGILL HAS TEN MAJORITY.

The official count in the East Bruce election was held on Monday before the returning officer at Walkerton and resulted in a majority of 10 for Mr. Cargill. There will be a recount, and as the Reform scrutineers report a large number of improper ballots accepted for Mr. Cargill, the prospects are that Mr. Truax may yet retain the seat.

Mr. Sol White Comes In for a Scoring.

The Leader of the Opposition Criticises the Address-Reply of the Premier to Mr. Meredith-Mr. White Heard From-The Address in Reply to the Speech

[Special to the ADVERTISER.]

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—The Legislative Assembly was occupied to day in discussing the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. An otherwise dull debate was enlivened by a reference of Mr. Biggar, the mover of the address, to the annexationist proclivities of Mr. Sol White. After referring to the different paragraphs of the address, he pointed out in reply to the charges made by Conservatives that debates were disloyal, that the only politician who had described himself as an annexationist was Mr. White, the lieutenant of the leader of the Opposition. TORONTO, Feb. 15 .- The Legislative As of the Opposition.

Mr. Lockhart, in seconding the address, said that they had been assured by a member of the Ottawa Government that they would scon have in the Dominion Cabinet a man of ability, and possessing the confidence of the people of Ontario. This was generally taken to refer to the member for London, Mr. Meredith, He asked whether it was inclusive from within generally taken to refer to the member for London, Mr. Meredith. He asked whether it was jealousy from within or pressure without, or that gentleman's modesty and disinclination to leave the scene of his present labors, which had prevented the adoption of the idea. Whatever the reason that honorable gentleman was with them still, and it was to be hoped they would long have him with them as the leader of the loyal Opposition, untainted by any doctrines of the member for North Essex.

Mr. Meredith replied to these remarks with some warmth. He little expected that an onslaught would be made on the Conservative party regarding matters entirely outside the jurisdiction of the House, and that matters would be imported into the debate which long ago had been tirely outside the jurisdiction of the House, and that matters would be imported into the debate which long ago had been put aside. He questioned the taste and propriety of such remarks. The Conservative party required no sponsor for its loyalty. He thought that the unfortunate death of the heir to the throne and the sentiments evoked thereby evidenced a feeling that if there were isolated cases of those who wished to sever their connections with the British Empire the great mass of the people were loyal. He commended the spirit of the letter written by Mr. Mowat as voicing the sentiments of the great mass of the Liberal party. He regretted the course taken by the member for North Essex, Mr. Sol White, and as leader of the Conservative party had no sympathy with it, but repudiated is as binding on the party. British connections stood in the fore front of the platform of the Conservative party. sagement for it. Dr. Mentague had been billed for almost every night up to the election, yet he wasn't in the riding at all. Sir John Thompson was billed for Walkerton on Friday night. He didn't appear to more an election campaign.—[Kincardine Review.

HON. WILFEID LAURIEE.

[Special to the ADVERTISEE!]

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—Hon. Wilfrid Laurier reached Toronto to-night on his way to Goderich where he speaks to-morrow night on behalf of the Mr. M. C. Cameron. He is in good health and in no way discouraged by the results of the by-elections.

He was present for a few minutes at the banquet of the Young Men's Liberal Club held at the Walker House and upon entering the room was received in the most enthusiastic manner. The applause lasted for fully five minutes and the cheers were nearly deafening. In reply to the toast to "The Liberal Leaders" he said: "I have been ill, but I am not dead, and while we may have been whipped in some of the by-elections, the Government will find at Ottawa a strong Opposition, prepared to do their duty and present law it. U. S. PRESIDENTIAL BEE! ussell A. Alger, the Michigan Ex-lican Nomination.

The partially anticipated withdrawal of scretary James G. Blaine from the candidacy for the United States Republican Presidential nomination is the sequel for greatly increased activity on the part of other aspirants. It seems likely, under the other aspirants. It seems likely, under the circumstances, that the heated preliminary canvass which preceded the Republican convention of 1876, will be repeated this year. Between Alger and Cullum, of Illinois, Sherman and McKinley of Ohio, and Harrison fighting for a renomination, not to mention numerous and darker horses, matters at Minneapolis promise to be highly interesting. Ex-Governor Alger is one of the wealthiest citizens in the Wolverine State. The lumber trade has made him many times a millionaire, and Michigan Republicans regard him as the strongest man in that State.

why Londoners Laugh.

Londoners are laughing at the way in which the Advertiser has cornered, the Free Press on the question of Mr. Hyman's municipal record. On Jan. I, 1884, the gentleman who is now the Liberal candidate for London and who was then a member of the City Council of London and chairman of the Finance Committee. "Ald. Hyman," it said, "who has presided over that branch of the public economy for the past couple of years so acceptably, made a statement which cannot fail to be regarded in a reassuring sease. During his term of office something in the nature of a revolution has taken place in the mode of conducting out financial business." He had effected a large saving in the current outlay. The real state of the city's affairs was never known "until men of ability and rectitude were got to take hold of the matter." Mr. Hyman seems to be the right sort of man to send to Ottawa.—[Teronto Globe.]

Talks Peace and Prepares to Fight. Berlin advices are to the effect that the Kaiser, however much he may talk peace, believes in no relaxation in getting ready believes in no relaxation in getting ready for war. Work on the additions to the fleet is being pushed with great activity, and if the Reichstag will consent Germany will have a navy in the course of a few years able to rank very near to that of France. The Kaiser is reported to have said that the next war would be conducted on sea as well as on land, and that Germany would not be driven from the sea by a power she had vanquished in the field. On the other hand, there is a strong opposition in the Reichstag to increase naval appropriations. The Social Democrats are opposed other hand, there is a strong opposition in the Reichstag to increase naval appropriations. The Social Democrats are opposed on principle to expenditure in preparing for ofcensive warfare; but, added to these, the representatives of Bavaria, and of South Germany in general, are jealous of Prussia, and think they see in a formidable navy only a weapon for Prussian aggrandizement. Having no seaports or ocean commerce, they are not willing to pay for building up the commerce and prestige of the north.

It is intimated that the Keiser's visit to his kitchen the other day was not altogether prompted by curiosity. Among the vagaries lodged in the Imperial mind is an apprehension of poison. The Kaiser, it is said, thinks there are enemies, both in and out of Germany, who would like to see him taken oi!, and who would enjoy seeing a child wearing a crown. This idea has been getting such a hold upon his Majeaty's mind that it has become very annoying to the Empress and the rest of the family.

Gen Booth's Triumphal Entry.

Gen. Booth's Triumphal Entry. The monster procession of the Salvation The monster procession of the Salvation Army on Saturday, upon the occasion of the "triumphal entry" into London of "General" Booth, was by far the greatest effort ever made by the Salvationists to attract attention to their work. There were 5,000 Salvation lads and lassies in line, the number being limited to that. There were fully 20,000 other Salvationists in the throngs which witnessed the show. Everything that paint, ink and canvas could do to attract attention was done by the army. There were 4,500 red, yellow, blue and white pennants in the process. Everything that paint, ink and cauvas could do to attract attention was done by the army. There were 4,500 red, yellow, blue and white pennants in the procession, so that it looked, from the house-tops, like an enormous many-colored serpent winding its way through the streets. Proudly bearing banners in this rainbow-like parade was a representative battalion of juitor soldiers, mounted on chariots, twelve in number, suitably decorated with mottoes as to their work among the children. Another was formed of the Slum contingent, then followed the cavairy force, next the "artillery," just inangurated, 25 men mounted on tricycles; a naval brigade, formed of a contingent of lifeboat men belonging to the army. Another interesting battalion was composed of the female cadets, a brigade of saved drunkards. Then came the Eastbourne battalion with the trade contingent and representatives of the Salvation Farm Colony, with interesting farm trophics on charts. The last battalion was composed of a detachment of continental officers in France, Germany, Italy, Switzer-size in the field and Previous to the passage of this procession through the streets, General Booth had been driven to the Victoria Hotel, and he reviewed the troops as they passed the veranda facing Buckingham Pslace road. At night, a banquet at which 5,000 soldiers sat down, was held in Agricultural Half. Islington. It is estimated that 2,000,000 people witnessed the parade.

A Corpuse in Nearly Every House.

A Corpse in Nearly Every House. Letters from St. Petersburg show that the telegrams which pass the censorship do not depict half the horrors of the situation. In the Province of Samara a Government official who went to carry relief to a village contained a corpse, and some of them con-tained several. In Penza the people may tained several. In Penza the people may be seen praying for death. Suicide, however, is infrequent, no matter how terrible the situation. The Russian peasant, when his very last resource is gone, waits for death to come. The Government is already finding it difficult, on account of the enormous drain of the famine, to meet other expenses, and some official salaries are already in arrears. Work, however, is being pushed in the navy yards and on the military roads, the starving peasantry being largely employed for the latter purpose.

church, and then set fire to it. Before the fiames could be extinguished the interior of the church was destroyed. The military authorities at once sent a detachment of troops to the scene of the outrage. The soldiers after they had subdued the fire turned their attention to the authors of the vandalism and succeeded in arresting many of them.

appeared on Wednesday last on ner way to school at Bristol, has been found. The police were watching for her all over the West of England and following false clues. It was left to her own brother to trace his wayward sister to Shrewsbury, where he discovered her at an inn in male attire. She was willing enough to accompany him home and was restored to the arms of her parents. The escapade was the freak of a romantic girl, who suddenly conceived the idea of putting into effect her long-cherished dream of seeing the world. She left the train at Gloucester, went to a clothing store, and bought suit of man's clothes on the plea that she intended to give it to the poor person who had appealed to her for charity. She then went to the barber's and induced the man to cut her hair, on the pretense that she suffered from headaches. She later took the train to Mitcheldean, and while in the compartment of a first-class coach effected a change of clothing, leaving her suit of woman's appear on the seat. At Middledean she alighted, looking like a bright young boy. From that time she had series of amusing adventures, managing to deceive everybody and to clude pursuit, although the whole country was aroused and searching for her. It trenspires new that Kate had made similar attempts before. She was a high-spirited girl, speiled by indulgence of her parents, and could not be restrained. There is nothing to be said against her character. Her motives were to escape the thraddom of home and school life, and seek a life of what, to her, in her ignorance of the world, seemed one of innocent adventure. Her brother, who knew her ways and inclinations, followed her closely as soon as the search began, and succeeded, while all the police were at loggerheads, in discovering ther hiding place and rescuing her from danger.

LONDON, Feb. 15 .- In the House Commons to-night, Mr. Jackson, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated that the Secretary for Ireland, stated that the whole sum of £1,000,000, assigned for the purchase of land in Ireland under the Ashebourne Act, had been absorbed. The pending applications for advances, he added, amounted to £301,584 above the sum provided by the act.

Mr. Sexton's amendment was rejected by the close vote of 179 to 158. The announcement of the figures was received with prolonged Opposition and Irish cheers. The address in reply to the speech from the throne was then formally adopted. The Local Government Bill for Ireland is to be introduced on Thursday.
