PERMANENT PEPSIN.

THE INSEPARABLE STANDARDS OF VALUE ARE PERMANENCY AND ACTIVITY.

When a physician prescribes Pepsin and his patient finds that it "sticks to the paper," that it forms a gummy mass "in powders," he may rely upon it that has not been dispensed; if he has ordered Fairchild's, this behaviour is positive evidence that he and his patient have been the victims of "substitution."

FAIRCHILD'S PEPSIN

PEPSINS

which are hygroscopic, which do undergo, upon exposure to air, the changes characteristic of peptone, are offered (in the form of scales and in powder) with pretensions to permanent quality.

If a product is sought, of well-proven permanency and of highest standard of activity, Fairchild's Pepsin is the one which will never give cause for complaint.

Fairchild's was the original

"Scale Pepsin;"

the first positively "free from starch, sugar, acid, peptones or any added substance." The host of imitations of "Scale Pepsin" bear witness to the value and reputation of the original.
