Those who attended Emerson Coatsworth's mass-meeting in the Pavilion on Saturday evening went expecting a warm time and they were not disappointed. The big edifice was jammed to the doors with a huge audience much divided in opinion. Overwhelmingly Conservative as it was in feeling, there was nevertheless a liberal contingent of Reformers present; but a secondary division of the gathering.

Mr. Gurney Strikes the Liberals. Mr. Gurney, in opening the meeting, said he believed the gentlemen to speak would receive a good hearing, for there was not the same hard feeling between Conservatives and Reformers in Canada as there was beformers the two hig parties of the Unittormers in Canada as there was be-tween the two big parties of the Unit-ed States. Proceeding, amidst cries of What about National schools?" he spoke of the National Policy and what ether he would have been present at this meeting had it not been that he wished to set himself right with his fellow-citizens with regard to commer-cial reciprocity. The Liberals advocated now commercial reciprocity, now free trade and now a policy of gradually cutting down the tariff. The party with a definite policy was surely preferable.

Rufus Pope Speaks.

Mr. Rufus H. Pope, member for Compton, Que., being called upon, could not be heard when he began to speak. The announcement of his name by the chairman was greeted with howls, and when he finally gained a hearing, he said he was interested to know that his name was received with a peculiar boon in Toronto, but it is could not be heard when he began to speak. meeting.

The members' stand was ablaze with the race-going finery of Toronto's dames du mode, while the lawn was thronged by the seemed to be there—bench and bar were largely represented, the military element was much in evidence, dozens of doctors had for the nonce abandoned their patients, and even gentlemen of the cloth were there to see the horses perform, while bankers, and bankers and men of business generally, seemed to have entirely deserted the mark and exchange for "the sport of kings." The great and a'l-powerful public were there, too, in such overwhelming numbers that it was a matter of no little difficulty. to make headway through the multitude in the eastern enclosure, while the crowd in the betting ring can be fitly described only, by using that hackneyed phrase, "a seething mass." Before each race currents and eddies of eager humanity whirled through the ring and around the score of bookmakers' stands, while the pencilers chalked up the odds and took the speculators' money. And not all of this, it may be said, was returged, for favorites were out of form.

The track, lawn and field were at their best, and the visitor was almost puzzled to know which was to be the most admired, the magnificent view from the top of the big stand, the pretty and handsome costumed women or the fleet thoroughbreds. Altogether it was a day to dispel thoughts of two modern bugbears—the "horseless age" and "hard times"—for the 9000 peope who were there did not go to see the last appearance of man's best friend, nor would such a crowd expend good coin of the realm for an afternoon's sport if prosperity were as far from our city and country as the pessimistic few affect to believe. The sport was satisfying, and there was good variety—a long-distance hunters' race and steeplechase and four flat races being on the card. the betting ring can be fitly described only.
