LOST PRESTIGE. London, May 17 .-- The Times says this morning: "It cannot be denied that Admiral Cervera has lost prestige in visiting Curacoa. CERVERA CORNERED. New York, May 17.-Washington dispatches indicate that the naval board has the Spanish fleet now so thoroughly bottled up that escape is impossible. Advices from Sampson indicate that he now controls the northeasterly outlets from the Caribbean Sea, and that it will be impossible for Cervera to escape by those passages. In 24 hours Schley can be off the northern coast of Cuba, rendering any Spanish attempt to-reach Havana or escape from the Caribbean Sea, via the Yucatan passage, impossible, without an engagement. The Oregon is safe, and she and the Marietta were at once ordered to a position which will prevent a Spanish escape along the route by which it reached its present situation. It is believed that the supplies so frequently referred to as being on the Spanish flying squad-
