LONDON, FRIDAY, SEPT. 27.

THE STATESMAN AND THE POLITICIAN.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's treatment of the Japanese question in his address to the Manufacturers' Association, was in statesmanlike contrast to Mr. Borden's speeches in British Columbia on the same subject. The one speaks with the responsibility of his high office; the other with the irresponsibility of Opposition, intent only on making party capital and catching votes.

Mr. Borden's ex post facto denunciation of Canada's part in the Anglo-Japanese convention is absurd and insincere. He and his followers held up their hands for the treaty when it was before Parliament two years ago. They are equally at fault with the Government if a mistake was made. It is easy to be wise after the event, but Parliament could not foresee that the treaty would raise a difficulty which was believed to have been satisfactorily disposed of.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier explains that Canada gave her assent to the treaty, on the understanding that permanent restrictions had been placed upon Japanese emigration to Canada. The emigration from Japan has not exceeded the limit—about 600 souls in a year—agreed to by the Tokio Government, but the movement of Japanese from Hawaii, which has revived the problem, could not be foreseen. Mr. Borden certainly did not foresee it, and his belated attack upon the Government is unworthy of a public man in his high position. He is trimming his sails to the gust of popular passion in British Columbia, without regard to the delicate questions of imperial diplomacy, which a Canadian statesman should bear in mind. The Premier, who must be governed by imperial considerations, has promised inquiry and consideration. If a way is found out of this difficulty, as seems likely, there will be no thanks due to politicians like Mr. Borden, who have fanned the flames of prejudice, and tried to aggravate the situation.

SHALL THE DEATH PENALTY BE EXTENDED?

United States Attorney-General Bonaparte, in a recent address, made the suggestion that "an attempt to commit a capital crime ought to be made itself capital, when this should seem proper to the trial judges, and also that when a man has been thrice convicted of major crimes, upon his conviction for his fourth offense of the like grade, he should be liable, again in the discretion of the court, to the death penalty."

Because of its source, the suggestion has attracted considerable attention in legal circles, and is being freely discussed by the profession. By some lawyers the view is held that while there is no hard and fast rule to apply to persons convicted of major offenses, instances might arise where the death penalty might be warranted, and others where it certainly would not be. Others instance cases where such a penalty under identical circumstances with those suggested by Attorney-General Bonaparte would have been most unjust, as, for example, where a man is a criminal because of injuries received, and where a crime is due to the insanity of the perpetrator. Besides, there are many criminals today who, had their environment been different, might now be useful citizens.

Among the laity the suggestion of the Attorney-General is not likely to gain much support, seeing that public opinion in the United States is divided on the point whether capital punishment is justifiable even in the case of murder, in some states the death penalty being unknown. At the same time there is one class of criminal which should be considered by itself, and special punishment meted out to it, and that is the professional, who has resorted to crime for the love of it, and as a means of gaining a livelihood. It is rare that he reforms, and prison seems only to harden him. For him some special treatment is no doubt necessary, but it surely can be found somewhere between Attorney-General Bonaparte's three-times-and-out plan and the present system. To carry out the former would necessitate the preparation of a list of major crimes to come under the death penalty, and when this has been done the chief result would probably be to put further impediments in the wheels of justice, which in the criminal courts of the republic now run none too smoothly. Some one has said, and with some truth, that "the worst use you can put a man to is to hang him." The tendency in civilized society will be probably to narrow and not enlarge the limits of capital punishment.

DR. PUGLEY'S CHARGES.

So far there has been no authoritative denial of Dr. Pugley's allegations concerning the Conservative campaign fund for 1904, much less any show of inclination to accept his challenge to prove what he says. He claims he can bring proofs that half a million dollars was raised and distributed to defeat the Laurier Government, and that $25,000 of this sum was spent in one constituency. The St. John, N. B., Sun says:

"In answers to bluffing demand that he produce his proof at once it may be pointed out that a fair inference from the Minister's remarks is that he is not in a position to do so unless legal action is instituted. He only said that 'he could show' and that 'he knew.' He did not affirm that he was in present possession of all the facts necessary for a detailed statement. It is possible either that he has received the incriminating evidence in such a way that he is under obligation not to reveal it himself, or that he knows where such evidence may be obtained, but does not possess it himself in detail. In either circumstance it is obvious that only through the courts, in which unwilling witnesses could be placed under oath and their knowledge extracted from them, could the details be placed before the public. It may be as to prove beyond dispute the truth of the charge that leading Conservatives in 1904 were involved in a gigantic conspiracy to overthrow the Government by corrupt and discreditable means.

"Eugley is making no threats of terrible things he will do unless certain charges against the Government are withdrawn; he is not holding out immoral offers to the Opposition leader of silence in return for silence. He has simply stated that if Mr. Borden will provide the only means by which evidence of shocking Conservative corruption can be made public, he will guarantee to produce that evidence. He himself, as he pointed out in an interview with the St. John Globe yesterday, did not enter action against these Conservative members who participated in or profited by the plot. The legal time for such procedure is past. But he points out an easily possible way by which the whole affair can be ventilated and offers to Mr. Borden every facility in taking that way."

A great public service would be performed if the Conservative campaign fund of 1904 could be traced to its source, as light might be thrown on the motives of the group of capitalists who maneuvered to defeat the Laurier Government. There are some circumstances, among them the undoubted attempt to lure Mr. Blair into the Opposition campaign, which are still shrouded in mystery. What did these men hope to gain by the success of the Conservative party? What understanding had they with Conservative managers? The answer to these questions may yet be forthcoming.

Mr. Edward Gurney wants a tariff as high as Haman's gallows. The consumers are hanged!

Mr. Borden's denunciation of the Anglo-Japanese treaty is the most remarkable case of hindsight on record.

The meanest trick the weather could play would be a snow storm while Kipling is in Canada this autumn.

Some of his opponents, who were disposed to place Mr. Borden on a higher plane than some of his associates, are beginning to doubt his superiority.

Some members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association want everything in this country protected except fish. They are like Sir Robert Peel's fish dealer, who believed in free trade in everything except herrings.

THE LIBERAL LEADERSHIP.

[Brantford Expositor.]

Mr. MacKay has many qualifications for the important office to which he has been called, an office presently fraught with grave and perhaps discouraging responsibility, but one of high honor and full of promise for the future. Mr. MacKay is a brainy man, with high rank at the bar, in the very zenith of manhood, aggressive and forceful as a speaker, and full of fight. He will make a capable successor to Mr. Graham, and under his leadership the Reform party will lose nothing of the inspiration which has come to it during the past few months, and is certain to be in splendid fighting shape for the next general elections.

THE RIVER OF LIFE.

[Campbell.]

The more we live, more brief appear our life's succeeding stages;
 A day to childhood seems a year,
 And years like passing ages.

The gladness current of our youth
 Ere passion's fire disorders,
 Steals lingering like a river smooth
 Along its grassy borders.

But as the careworn cheek grows wan,
 And sorrow's shades fly thicker;
 Ye stars, that measure life to man,
 Why seem your courses quicker?

When joys have lost their bloom and breath,
 And life itself is rapid,
 Why, as we reach the Falls of Death,
 Feel we its tide more rapid?

It may be strange—yet who would change
 Time's course to slower speeding,
 When one by one our friends have gone
 And left our bosoms bleeding?

MOTHER'S DREAM

SAVED HER GIRL

Pretty Artist Had Turned On the Gas in the Bathroom—Wanted to Die.

New York, Sept. 27.—Miss Minnie Hanley, a beautiful artist, eighteen years old, of No. 48 East Thirty-first street, was saved from death by a warning dream of her mother, and is in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital charged with attempted suicide.

Mrs. Hanley, the mother, is caretaker of the three-story house owned by a man named Forrest, and with her daughter occupies apartments on the third floor. Miss Hanley, who is admired by many in the neighborhood because of her unusual beauty, is a painter of china of rare ability and very enthusiastic over her art.

According to the story the mother told the police, the girl was engaged to marry Earl Bennett, a printer, living in Brooklyn. The marriage had been set for the first of next year. According to the mother, Bennett came to the house and told the girl that he had had consumption and his physician had ordered a change of climate. He had accordingly decided to return to his former home in Virginia, and would have to abandon his plans to marry, for the time being at least.

Miss Hanley seemed to become morose and left the house, returning three hours later. She refused to tell her mother where she had been, but it is believed she met her sweetheart at a gay good-bye. She went to her room, Mrs. Hanley also went to bed, but awoke in a short time after a dream which made her believe all was not right with her daughter.

Hurrying to the daughter's room she found it empty. She found the girl in the bathroom and then returned to bed, but not to sleep. She rose again at 1:30, and went to the bathroom. Pushing open the door, she says, she found the girl on the floor, with the gas turned on full force and a bottle near by. She threw open the window and the girl soon revived. Miss Hanley said the bottle had contained gas, which she had taken to make death painless.

Police Officer Owen Smith, of the West Thirtieth Street Station, heard Mrs. Hanley's cries for assistance, and rushed into the house. He found the girl apparently all right, and took her to the West Thirtieth Street Station where a charge of attempted suicide was made, and she was locked up.

Upon finding herself in a cell she became hysterical, and when Dr. Harbeck arrived from New York Hospital he advised her removal to Bellevue.

On the way to the hospital, according to the police, Miss Hanley declared to her mother, who accompanied her: "I've stopped me this time, but I'll kill myself yet. I've nothing now to live for."

 Hears you sobbing, sobbing;
 Pretty, pretty robin,
 Near my bosom

 A well-known musician was talking about old-fashioned concerts.

"Some of the hits directed at these concerts were merited," she said. "One hit, and a good one, was made by a crusty old man. He called upstairs to his daughters: 'What a time you girls take getting ready for the concert! Look at me; a bit of wadding in each ear, and I'm all ready.'"

TO THE BUTTERFLY.
 [Samuel Rogers.]
 Child of the sun! pursue thy rapturous flight,
 Mingling with her thou lovest in fields of light;
 And, where the flowers of Paradise unfold,
 Quaff fragrant nectar from their cups of gold.

There shall thy wings, rich as an evening sky,
 Expand and shut with silent ecstasy!
 Yet wert thou once a worm, a thing that creeps
 On the bare earth, then wrought a tomb and slept.

And such is man; soon from his cell of clay
 To burst a seraph in the blaze of day.

ONE INDIAN'S INCOME.
 [Canada Courier.]
 Mr. Heming, the author of "Spirit Lake," according to New York Life, has made a curious compilation. It occurred to Mr. Heming that an accurate record of the various kinds of game killed by an Indian during his hunting career would be interesting and suggestive. To obtain it, he consulted with an old fur trader, who had known a certain Indian from boyhood, and who for a long time had bought his annual stock of furs. This Indian, known in Northwestern Canada as one of the best fur hunters in the country of the "Strong Woods," spent several days with the trader last summer, and together they went carefully over the records of the Indian's hunting during a period of 39 years.

The Indian has been a rover over many regions wide apart, and this explains the great variety of game in the list that follows:
 Wood buffalo, 49; moose, 390; wapiti, 156; caribou, 195; small deer, 78; beaver, 585; mountain sheep, 60; mountain goats, 29; timber wolves, 112; lynx, 390; wolverines, 25; red foxes, 390; cross foxes, 78; silver foxes, 4; black foxes, 2; otter, 195; beaver, 1,000; fisher, 195; martens, 1,000; muskrat, muskrat, 3,900; porcupines, 19. Total, 2,500.

To these may be added 16,000 hares, 24,000 feathered creatures, and 36,000 fish of various kinds—in the killing of which he was helped by his family. During these years his annual income from the sale of his furs to the traders fluctuated from $500 to $2,000 per annum.
