EVENING STOCK LETTER. NEW YORK, June 11. - Thomson & McKinnon wire Jones, Easton, Mc-Callum Co., Ltd., brokers, Royal Bank Building, London, Ont.: In the absence of other news it must be assumed convention happenings served as a stimulant in today's mar-

market as a whole gave a splendid illustration of what may be expected when the proper incentive appears. The delegates at this year's convention have within their power to nominate men big enough to solve our many problems. The men that will ignore party politic and work for the greatest good to the greatest number. The mere nomination will not change fundamentals, but an aggressive president can do wonders aggressive president can do wonders in restoring some semblance of order out of the admittedly chaotic conditions that now exist. There is crying need for more work, greater production, restoration of lost balance, where men in all walks of life will think and act normally as they did prior to the war. n all walks of life will think and act normally as they did prior to the war.

It is within the power of either party to bring this about.

Today's market was strong throughout, except in one or two issues, there was nothing spectacular about the advance, but it was persistent all through twance, but it was persistent all through the prior to the war.

further easing of the recent freight blockade. The United States Steel Cor-blockade. The United States Steel Corporation reported another large gain in tonnage for May, bringing total infilled orders to the highest point in almost three years.

In trade circles, however, there were further reports of reduced activity and downward revision of price schedules for fall delivery. Coppers were influenced by similar conditions, plus the sharp break in silver.

Credit restrictions were again country-wide, the local market evincing greater firmness even for call money. Exchange on London favored that centre, and the increased bullion holdings of the Bank of England revived rumors of further gold expxorts to this market.

James McLauchlin, Sen., gave personal reminiscences and experiences in the early days in this city, while Jas. H. Rutherford, formerly editor of the Times, gave a very complete review of the history of early navigation on the Georgian Bay.

Following this, the delegates were the guests of Mayor Patterson and the city council at tea at Harrison Park Inn. and then came a drive about the city.

Human Diet Than Nectar.

EVERY FARM NEEDS HONEYBEE COLONY No Article Better Suited To

There should be a few colonies of the honey bee kept on each farm as a matter of economy in aiding and assisting in fruit pollenization. The farm apiary should be recognized as a necessity, not a luxury. There is no article of diet or food better suited to the general demands of the human organization than the nectar guthered by the erai demands of the human organization than the nectar gathered by the honeybee. As a matter of saving the waste of the farm, there is a great deal said nowadays, and very properly, too, but frequently the discussion is directed to crops and the things that directed to crops and the things that man neglects.

There is a very valuable waste in the form of nectar in the flora of grasses, plants and fruit bloom on the farm that is seldom thought of, and very seldom any provision made for its saving. Just what this is worth in dollars and cents to the 160-acre farm can only be guessed at. But an estimate of 500 pounds at 20 cents per pound would amount to $100. This would be the work of five colonies of bees, allowing for all kinds of bad seasons and unfavorable weather for the crop and its harvesting. Some colonies double this amount under very favorable conditions. There are two very substantial reasons why every farm should have an apiary installed and its work carefully looked after. First, every farmly enjoying the advantages and privileges of farm life, should get out of it all the sweetness and nectar that it, by nature affords because there are some ture affords, because there are some hardships and disappointments that go with farming, as is the case with mos 1923 1925 with farming, as is the case with most other occupations.

Another very good reason for the apiary on the farm is the money advantage it affords in turning the waste of nectar produced into an article of merchandise. It is just so much added to the proceeds of the farm each year that otherwise would not be had.

Justice Benedict pointed out that the four, being technically enemy aliens, would be unable to apply for citizenship papers at all but for an act passed in 1918 giving the president power to in 1918 giving the president power to exempt those whose loyalty is beyond question, after an investigation by the department of justice, from the operation of the enemy alien rules. The department certified that the four were loyal and eligible for citizenship.

But Justice Benedict said, the president cannot delegate his powers to the department of justice or any other agency. Hence, before an enemy alien may be admitted to final citizenship, the president must personally pass upon his case. his case.
