His Majesty, The King.
"His Majesty congratulates the Association on the successful results of its War Work."

It's for our boys' sake!

FROM end to end of the long firing line in France, "no matter where you are billeted," writes a Canadian from the trenches, "there you will find the 'Y'—the nearest thing to home we boys have." Another declares, "It is the last evidence of humanity as our boys go forward to their grim job in the trenches—the last sign that anybody cares."

Picture the mingling of men of every description, beset by temptations forced upon them, living under awful discomforts, far removed from the restraining influences of home—and facing death.

Where is the man or woman in this great protected land of homes who would deny each soldier a single comfort? While you send your soldier hero from time to time a few welcome newspapers turn your boys' thoughts homeward.

Temptations and Danger

Think of the weary vigils in the muddy, cold trenches when often the only warm refreshment available is that brought in by some brave Y.M.C.A. worker. Think of the long days in rest billets where fierce temptations beset your precious boys on all sides. It is there you will find the familiar Y.M.C.A. "hut" dispensing good cheer, keeping up the boys' spirits, maintaining their "morale," and attracting them by concerts, music, sing-songs, games, moving pictures, refreshments, etc.

And let us not forget those precious reminders of spiritual welfare that have saved so many thousands of easily led boys, and have converted to the better life other thousands of hardened men of the world, men of almost every religious preference under the sun.

What a glorious task it is! How we wish you could read with us the fervent letters of appreciation from the soldiers themselves, from fathers, mothers, and well wishers everywhere. "Please find enclosed

Consider a moment the immense cost of easing the strain upon our soldiers, not only all over Canada, but at the many Canadian camps in England and France. Consider the expense of keeping the service up to par, for instance, as our armies advance and leave the established huts behind. The whole task is indeed colossal.

Will you not take this appeal to heart and give generously according to your means?
