

Store closes to-day at I o'clock-Saturday half holiday. Other days we close at 5 o'clock during July and August. No other store in America, so far as we know, closes regutarly at 5.

Less work and more play is a step nearer the millennium. It is the sort of reform the people want, and the sort of philanthropy salespeople most admire. It concerns men and women who're not afraid to work, who welcome service, who make a business of being ready with many expedients for every emergency, who seem to have no end of strength and patience, who devote themselves to a dozen, twenty, forty customers one after another, who take success and failure with the same complaisance, who help other salesmen and take help from them, who devote themselves to the business of selling as if selling were what the world turns on, who make it pleasant for customers to come again and again, adapting themrelves to all the different dispositions and catching a customer's want or notion or whim in a minute. Probably no class of people do more to deserve the good-will of the public, and In no way can shoppers show such appreciation as in this matter of Early Closing.

This store's zeal and duty is not slow. With the courage of conviction it closed early years ago when everybody else kept open. Now we're satisfied to cut ten hours a week off the routine of business, confident that customers will welcome the change in the interests of store reform.

open to the Judge was to endeavor to construe it taken with other clauses which were in the act and of the same character as the clause in dispute. He was successful in this contention, and Judge McDougall's reasoning is a very clear.exposition of the opinion that the law is directory and not mandatory, and that the intention of the voter is of more importance than anything else. In contradistinction to Mr. McCarthy, counsel on the other side argued that the main object of the ballot law was to see this question settled by His Hon-or's decision.
