The Story of the Diamond

Chapter 16.—Its Polishing.

After the stone has been properly trimmed it is ready for polishing. The present method was first introduced by one Von Berquin, in the town of Bruges, about the year A.D. 1450, and is quite simple.

A flat solid disc of soft steel of 18 or 18 inches diameter (somewhat like a grindstone laid on its side) revolves at the rate of 3,000 turns per minute. Upon this is placed a paste of diamond dust and heavy oil. The stone is set in a little cone of fused spelter, or some such soft metal, to hold it absolutely firm. When cooled, this is gripped in a sort of claw, upon the end of an adjustable arm, which is weighed down upon this fast-revolving disc.

As the grinding or polishing process is a very slow one, owing to the extreme hardness of the diamond, the one operator is enabled to attend to several such machines at the same time.

In the case of stones of a fair size, the process is comparatively simple, but in those of pin-head size or smaller the virtue of patience must be greatly taxed, especially when you bear in mind that the stone must be taken from the little metal core by melting, and reset again for the polishing of each separate little face or "facet" which is to be made upon it. In the case of a full-cut brilliant this means no less than 58 separate operations.

Monday we'll describe the different styles of cutting.

You never saw a "Birks" diamond of inferior quality. We always insist upon "nothing but the best."

Some Load.

In January, 1829, Col. Leonard Stone of Templeton, who owned a sawmill, said to his brother, Col. Ephraim Stone: "I've been sawing out lumber down't the mill for more'n a week, and there's any quantity of slabs. I will give the miller as big a load of wood as you can draw." Col. Ephraim began cogitating and making calls, and the next morning an improvised sled with runners thirty feet long, placed eight feet apart, was loaded with slabs until the pile was thirty-four feet long, twelve feet wide, and twenty feet high, and then eighty yokes of oxen were attached, and the load was drawn slowly around through Baldwinville, and up to the more level ground, where it was halted to receive the rest of the load. Then with common sleds they brought and piled on more and more slabs until there was no more at the mill. Then the whole huge load was hauled into the millster's dooryard.

RECENT DEATHS

The death, on April 8, of James A. Wallace, of Yarmouth, took place. He was a plumber and metal worker by trade, and for the past twenty-five years had conducted a very successful business. Mr. Wallace was a son of the late Andrew Wallace, of Halifax, and had only recently passed his sixty-sixth year. He leaves his widow, four sons, two of whom are Private Charles, overseas; Robert, in Halifax; Harry of St. John and William at home; and five daughters—Miss Susie in Halifax, the others in Yarmouth; also four brothers—William, Harry, Robert and Charles in Halifax.

Cyrus Young Gregory, a former resident of this city, died recently in Winnipeg. He is survived by his wife, one son, Samuel Gregory of Kent county, one daughter, Mrs. Hazel Johnson of Bangor, one brother, F. P. C. Gregory of this city, and three sisters, Miss Laura Gregory of this city, Mrs. Martha Moore of California, and Mrs. Mary Watson of St. Stephen.

William Wallace Graham, one of St. Andrew's widely known citizens, died on Wednesday morning. He was sixty-five years of age, a son of the late David and Margaret Graham. He leaves one sister and two brothers.

The death of Alexander Cochrane, an annual visitor to New Brunswick and a member of the Restigouche Salmon Club, is announced in Boston. He was one of the most prominent chemists in the United States. He was born in Scotland in 1840.

The death of Bliss R. Brown took place at his home in Vancouver on April 6. He was fifty-seven years of age and was formerly of Winston Settlement, N. B. Besides his wife he leaves two sons, one daughter, four sisters and four brothers.
