LABOR PARTY AND LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 4.—The independent labor party at its meeting at the temple yesterday, resumed the action of the Lord's Day Alliance in saying that Sunday meetings for political purposes were illegal. Several of the speakers said the party was as much a religious body as any of the churches, that everything it was doing, was for the uplift of humanity and the betterment of the Canadian working classes. Sunday was the only day that most of the men could gather together to discuss social and moral reform.

VICTORY FOR COOK OR A NEW PRESS AGENTPolar Explorer in The Centre Of Exciting Meeting In Denmark

SENSATION EVERY MINUTE

Copenhagen Paper's Account of Stirring Scene at Address by Cook With Accompanying Action of Man Who Denounced Him

Doctor Cook, who achieved some notoriety when he emerged from the frozen north with a story about finding the Pole, has either secured a new press agent of striking ability or has got a new start toward fame by convincing the people of Denmark that he is not a faker.

The Polar Publishing Company of New York sends out from the Copenhagen Express what purports to be a true account of Doctor Cook's recent adventures in the Danish capital, and announces that Dr. Cook is entering a suit against the New York Times for $100,000 because of the nature of its report of the Copenhagen meeting at which Cook defended himself against his opponents.

The Copenhagen newspaper shows that, whatever was the result of the meeting, there was excitement every minute. The Copenhagen account follows here:

(From Dagens' Express, Copenhagen, 25th October, 1911.)

The meeting last night in the Concert Palace was a decided and magnificent success for the North Pole traveler, Doctor Frederick A. Cook. This was also Doctor Cook's personal impression of the evening when we spoke to him after the lecture at the Hotel Phoenix.

But, of course, there was excitement. Demonstrative opinions of the most forceful American character were heard here and there in this country were openly expressed. The man who said he would "kill Doctor Cook" was not alone. "I want to see him," said a young man, "Dr. Norman Hansen, because the object of such strong hissing and whistling that he had to flee through a side door. Long before the meeting started the hall was crowded. In front of the speakers' stand a shabby dressed man, who walked around fighting with his arms in the air and tearing his long beard. The man in the solid black coat, who was Doctor Cook's false friend, Dr. Norman Hansen. In his appearance he was quite a contrast to the elegant audience in the hall.

At a quarter after eight o'clock Doctor Cook stepped before the curtain. He was greeted by strong applause, mixed with hissing and whistling. But the American doctor, who had walked among hungry Polar bears and Polar foxes was calm. When the excitement had subsided he left the platform to the chairman of the meeting, the young Dr. E. Holstein, in vain tried to bring him to his senses. It was impossible! Norman Hansen danced up on one of the chairs and stepped on some of those who sat close to the platform. When they protested against his "Young Socialist" demonstration he rolled his manuscript into the shape of a paper bomb which, with his entire strength, he threw at the head of an old lady.

The situation was not entirely without danger for Dr. Norman Hansen. The audience demanded that he be thrown out and beaten. Count Holstein stepped into the hall and saved the excited man from what he really desired.

"I have come here to hear him," said the angry man, "the nervous swindler. All his pictures are taken of stolen pictures!"

A big strong man approached Count Holstein and whispered confidentially to him: "I am a detective. Do you want me to throw Norman Hansen out?"

"No, for God's sake," the count said. "Don't do that."

And it was superfluous. Norman Hansen suddenly, by a side door, disappeared. He was followed by three or four gentlemen. In the corridor he yelled three times:—"Cook's LECTURE A VICTORY."

Now Cook started his lecture. By degrees he became enthusiastic so that the audience listened to him quietly. Only now and then, while the pictures were being shown, there were expressed differences of opinion, especially at the appearance of the pictures that bore direct reference to the subject of the North Pole.

Doctor Cook started to analyze the Peary attacks one by one.

"He has stated that he went to a crushing victory over his opponents. Why does he not do it?"

"I have not said that," said Hansen. "Perhaps it has been printed in the paper, and I can have no responsibility for that."

Dr. Cook smiled ironically. He understood that he had to do with a man who did not want to show fair play. For yesterday afternoon when our reporter, together with Doctor Cook, Mrs. Cook, Lonsdale, and another personal friend of the doctor, was sitting in the salon of Hotel Phoenix, Norman Hansen called Cook on the telephone and told him that he would come to the meeting and strike Cook dead in six questions. He also declared that he would create a scandal and stop the meeting.

True to his duty, Norman Hansen attempted to keep that promise. Now on the six destroying questions were asked.

"Perhaps I have promised to speak in six sentences," said Norman Hansen. Voices rose in the audience—"Hail! You have used more than one thousand words, you swindler! Get down to business, idiot."

With this encouragement, Norman Hansen asked his first question, which, true enough, was crushing, not to Dr. Cook, but to himself.

"I have been your friend, Dr. Cook," said he, "and I am not sorry to say how much I have enjoyed your lecture. But a voice from the back of the hall, where Editor Wrenblad was the central figure, called, 'Then go down if you are sorry to see him.' There was a large and representative audience, delegates being present from many different quarters, and many important items of business were dealt with."

This is the last we hear of Norman Hansen's gigantic overcoat. He is now at home, and his wife is shopping. Buy now at Wrenblad's. Hunt's clothing and furnishing store.

BUSINESS MEN'S TRIP
TO THE WEST INDIESCanadian League Reserves Space for 250 on S.S. Laurentic For January Sailing

The Canadian and West Indian League, will conduct a cruise to the West Indies in January on the White Star Liner Laurentic. The league has arranged to take half the space in the vessel for its members and any other Canadians who may care to join. This means that there will be accommodation on the boat for 250 Canadians.

The league, which has its headquarters in Montreal, has as its honorary president, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy as its president, T. B. Macaulay, while its executive council is composed of prominent Canadians interested in the development of trade between Canada and the West Indies.

The importance of the development of this trade has been recognized by various Canadian Boards of Trade, and efforts have been made from time to time to organize an excursion of Canadian business men to the West Indies to study for themselves the possibilities of trade and commerce.

These efforts, however, have always fallen through, owing to the lack of an organization like the Canadian and West Indian League to take hold of the project and carry it through.

The league has been hard at work for many months getting Canadians and West Indians in touch with each other, and P. Monro, the secretary, announces that the various boards of trade throughout the West Indies have arranged to entertain the members of our league throughout the island will join in the welcome. There is no doubt that the West Indian people will do everything possible to make the trip an instructive and enjoyable one. The recommendations of the royal commission regarding the development of trade between Canada and the West Indies on a reciprocal basis, will receive added emphasis from this trip.

The Laurentic is to sail from New York on January 29, and the trip will occupy thirty-one days. Visits will be made to Kingston, in Jamaica; Port au Prince, in Haiti; San Juan, in Puerto Rico; the capital of Barbados; Nassau, the capital of the Bahamas; to Venezuela, to Panama and to Cuba; to Port au Prince, in Haiti; to Cartagena, in Colombia; to the French Islands of Martinique; to the Danish island of St. Thomas; and to the United States island of Porto Rico.

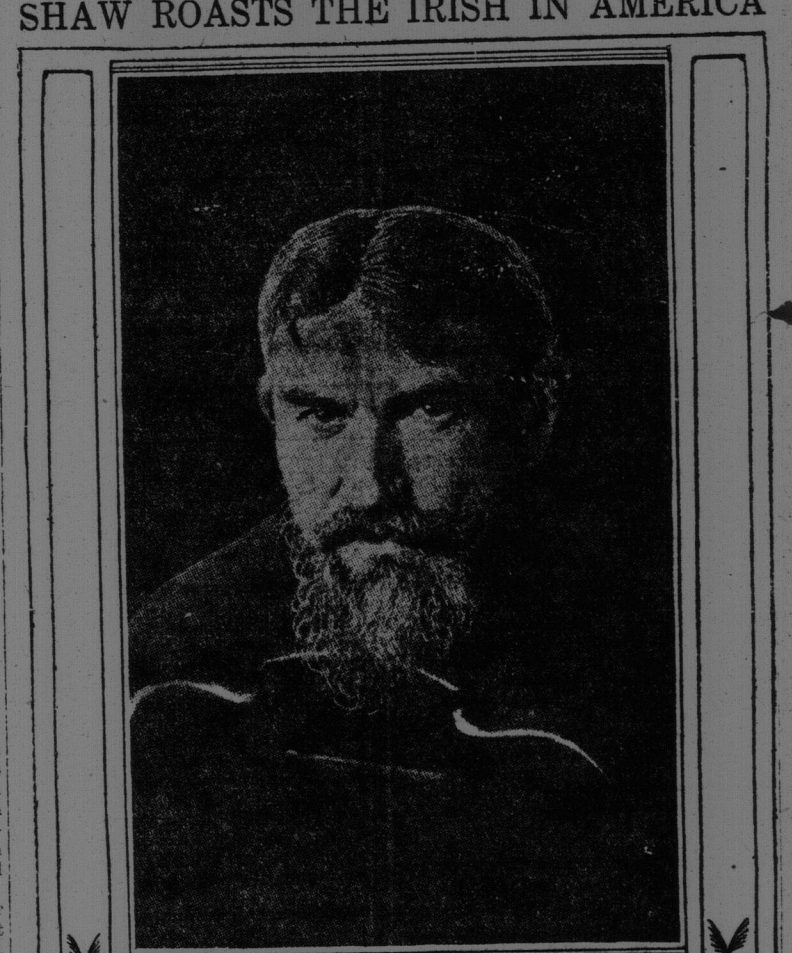

With this encouragement, Norman Hansen asked his first question, which, true enough, was crushing, not to Dr. Cook, but to himself.

"I have been your friend, Dr. Cook," said he, "and I am not sorry to say how much I have enjoyed your lecture. But a voice from the back of the hall, where Editor Wrenblad was the central figure, called, 'Then go down if you are sorry to see him.' SHAW ROASTS THE IRISH IN AMERICA

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, who has got himself in bad with the Irish-American people in America. In an interview he says that his own play, "The Shewing Up of Blanco Posnet," is a character study of America's young men of to-day, who are "hard drinking, foul mouthed persons, lost to the decencies of life." He predicts that Lady Gregory, who, he says, is the greatest Irishwoman in the world, will triumph over the New York and Boston Clan na Gael as she triumphed over the Dublin clan.

BOARD OF TRADE
THIS AFTERNOON

The annual meeting of the board of trade this afternoon is of unusual interest both on account of activity which has been shown by the friends of the two candidates for the presidency, H. C. Schofield and J. Hunter White and also on account of the matters which are on the programme for discussion. The first business is the election of officers. In accordance with the new plan adopted this year the nominations were made at the November meeting and the members have had ample time in which to make up their minds.

The report of the council, already summarized in these columns, will be presented for adoption, and the report of the sub-committee advancing changes in the form of the Pilotage Commission will be submitted.

W. F. Hatheway, M. P. P., will then introduce the subject of Technical Education and W. S. Fisher and Charles McDonald will speak to his resolution.

Immigration and the Agricultural Development of New Brunswick will be the subject of an address by W. S. Fisher and he will present a resolution urging greater activity along these lines.

An interesting address will be given by Wolf Brindle, formerly of Dartmouth, England.

12-10.
