PAULSEN FUNKS.

HE IS AFRAID OF MCCORMICK AND REFUSES TO RACE.

St. John's Champion in the West Where he Makes Many Friends, Paulsen is Afraid of McCormick and Refuses to Race.

Following from the Minneapolis Times of December 25th, we explain the relative positions of McCormick and Paulsen:

The Times office was filled with champions on skaters yesterday afternoon, all of them talking skate. Axel Paulsen and Hugh McCormick met here with the intention of making a match if possible, but no arrangements could be made, as the entire party adjourned to the "Times" Messrs. Tertine and Stevenson, McCormick's backers, were there ready with their money and anxious to make a match.

Paulsen, by that time, had had an opportunity to see the skater and had concluded that he was not ready to make a match. McCormick's proposition was to skate three races of five, ten and fifteen miles each, for $250 a side for each race and two-thirds and one-third of the one time gate receipts on the Palace rink track which he never and one-third of the one time gate receipts on the Palace rink track which he never and one-third of the one time gate receipts on the Palace rink track which he never.

Paulsen, by that time, had had an opportunity to see the skater and had concluded that he was not ready to make a match. McCormick's proposition was to skate three races of five, ten and fifteen miles each, for $250 a side for each race and two-thirds and one-third of the one time gate receipts on the Palace rink track which he never and one-third of the one time gate receipts on the Palace rink track which he never.

Paulsen, by that time, had had an opportunity to see the skater and had concluded that he was not ready to make a match.
