

With the chill autumn winds comes the revival of society, the past week being the gayest for many in our city. Noticeable among the entertainments were dances, bridges, bride's receptions, and informal drawing room teas, which, taken altogether, occupied an important part of the week. Wedding bells continued to ring and as in many cases this year St. John this week has lost one of the most popular of the younger set to another Western city.

Our new theatre, the Imperial, continues to attract large crowds, who are charmed not only with the costliness of the building but the high class of entertainment provided for these present.

A recent issue of Solntze-Rossli, a Russian art magazine, says the picture was bought by a Russian educator about 1885 or 1886 from a little museum in Northern Italy. It was not then recognized as a Raphael.
