ENLIGHTENMENT ON MARRIAGE AGE Prof. of Eugenics Explodes Popular Fallacy—Need be No Disparity Between Ages—Should be Comrades.

What is the best age at which to marry, and why? These questions of world-wide interest and importance were answered by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, LL.D., F.R.S., one of the delegates to the International Eugenics Congress, in an interview.

Incidentally, Dr. Hoffman, who occupies the position of statistician to the Prudential Insurance Company, of Newark, N. J., exploded what he described as one of the most popular fallacies that have ever prevailed regarding successful marriages.

"My experience and observation," said Dr. Hoffman, "have convinced me that the best ages for marrying are between 23 and 26 for men and women alike. I have no faith in the theory that there should be a wide disparity between the age of the man and the woman."

"My reason for fixing on between 23 and 26 as the ideal marrying ages for both sexes are roughly these: 'The man and the woman are then so far as marriage is concerned, at their best physical, mental and normal development. Their hereditary traits are now dominant. On the other hand, the twigs have been molded in the form it will probably retain, with a little modification for life.'"

"On the other hand, they are both still sufficiently pliable and become mutually complementary to one another. In other words, the man is willing to sacrifice himself to the happiness of the woman and the woman is willing to sacrifice herself to the happiness of the man. This is one of the essential conditions of true marriage. Perfect co-ordination is another."

"A boy or a girl," said Dr. Hoffman, "is quite apart from other considerations, cannot be expected to know his or her mind. This point, I think, requires no elaboration. At the same time I should like to state with all possible emphasis that every man of 25 or thereabout who is earning his living and wishes to marry should be permitted to do so, provided that he and his prospective partner are healthy."

"The woman of a man's choice has no right whatever to demand that he be earning a certain number of pounds a week before he enters into wedlock with her. I strongly deplore these so-called 'marriages of convenience,' no restriction should be placed—within reason, of course—on the number of children."

TURKEY'S TREASURE A VERITABLE DREAM

Figures of Dead Sultans Clad in Jewelled Robes and a Throne Ablaze with Large Diamonds.

London, Dec. 27.—R. J. Turner, in an interesting article in The Academy headed "Turkey's Treasure House," discusses the marvelous collection of jewels and curiosities that are in a corner of the old Blackchapel Palace, known as the treasury.

"Here, in all conscience," says Mr. Turner, "is lost enough alone to justify a triumphal entry into the ancient City of Constantinople and to make the mouths water of the Bulgarian or Serbian hosts if they were permitted to cross the threshold of the treasure chamber."

"In the time of Abdul Hamid access to this veritable cache of Abdullah was difficult to obtain. Ambassadors' intervention in the case of Europeans was necessary, and not always successful. Since the advent of Mahmud and the Young Turks, viewing privileges have been extended, but the signature of the Grand Vizier is still necessary to insure the unlocking of the famous portals."

"The procedure for a private view is quite an affair. After passing the sentries at the gate of the old palace and reporting one's arrival in the courtyard, a stately procession of befezzed and frock-coated officials, headed by a venerable Bede, issues from a side building. The guard comes to attention. Before the huge key is inserted in the lock the seal of the door is broken by the venerable one and carefully borne away. A distinct effort is required to turn the lock. The door opens only to reveal another barrier which is as solemnly unlocked. The black-coated procession flows in and takes up strategic positions in the chamber now open to view. Under the keen scrutiny of fifteen or twenty pairs of eyes distributed all over the room, the difficulties of annexation become apparent."

"The most striking object that meets the eye is the famous jeweled throne of one of the sultans' ancestors. This, as well as a smaller throne in the same glass case, is thickly encrusted with pearls, diamonds and rubies. It would be difficult to estimate the number of stones, some of which are of a fair size, but there must be many thousands and the effect on the wall of the throne is barbaric in the extreme. Its value is estimated at from one to two millions sterling. Here and there one sees a vacant setting whence the stone has disappeared, probably passing into the possession of some amiable-fingered favorite of the sultan."

Jewels Galore.

"Ranged around the room in cases is a long line of figures of sultans in their jeweled robes and turbans. Some of the vestments are literally stiff with precious stones, while to fasten the aigrette or the turban, a stupendous emerald or ruby is invariably utilized. An idea of the size of the ordinary run of the stones may be grasped by looking at half a small-sized hen's egg placed on end."

"The scabbard of each warrior's scimitar is elaborately incrustured with similar stones, with a specially large one on the top of the hilt. The collection of swords is barbaric in the extreme. It is when one comes to study the daggers that one realizes the huge fortunes embedded in such weapons. In some cases the emerald or ruby is so large that it is impossible to see the scabbard of the sword, and a mass of color about three inches thick. Displayed separately are some huge uncut but polished rubies and emeralds quite as large, to use a homely expression, as an ordinary cake of toilet soap. Whether such abnormal gems are of the purest ray serene one cannot tell for, but the whole effect is to recall the jeweled valley of Shalab and the Sultans and his fallacies for an ever prevailed regarding successful marriages."

"My experience and observation," said Dr. Hoffman, "have convinced me that the best ages for marrying are between 23 and 26 for men and women alike. I have no faith in the theory that there should be a wide disparity between the age of the man and the woman."

'Fruit-a-Lives' Cured Her Kidneys

Mountain, Ont., Dec. 14th, 1911. "I desire to let the world know the great debt I owe 'Fruit-a-Lives' which saved my life when I had given up hope of ever being well again."

For six years I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen. The pain in my side and legs would be so bad that I would faint with the agony."

Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Disease and gave me no hope of getting well. A kind neighbor visited me and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick who had been cured of a sickness like mine. I took 'Fruit-a-Lives' and in a short time, I began to feel better—the swelling went down—the pains were easier—and soon I was well."

I have gained over 30 pounds since taking 'Fruit-a-Lives'—and my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle."

AN INDIAN FAREWELL. (Lady Gay in Saturday Night.) Here is the inscription on a tombstone at Port Simpson, a place one hears much about these days:

In memory of late Legate, the Head Chief. Died long time ago, before white people came. Also three other Head Chiefs, named Legate. Also Paul Legate, the Head Chief of the Tsimshians Nation, who died a Christian at Port Simpson, B. C., January 7, 1891, aged 45 years. Paul Legate said, the day he died, to his people: I would like to die in a lonely place, so no one would see me as I die. His body was found eight hours after, God gave him more than he hoped for."

This extraordinary inscription was copied and sent to me the other day by a railroad official, and it certainly sounds like one's idea of a noble red man. The clinging to his dignity, his dislike of having his people behold him in dissolution, and his idea of the route to the orthodox paradise are real Indian. Where he got his happy name from is what I should like to find out. It sounds enough like my own to give me a sort of fellow feeling."
