Mosquitoes and the Election. For the Carleton Place Herald.

Again the dire mosquitoe pest Has come, our borders to infest. In boggy marsh and swampy wood, First, Spring awakes a wingless brood Of harmless wrigglers, that, in shoals, Disport within the stagnant pools— Till now, emerged, thick swarms arise, Spurn the dank mould, and seek the skies. Not denser, in the dark abodes, The crowds that haunt the Stygian floods

Not fiercer, on the unhallowed coast, Tell Harpies vex the encamping host; Nor with more eager thirst for blood, Pursues its prey, the vampire brood Than issuing forth, from swamp and fen, These dark invade th' abodes of men. With venomed bite and buzzing soun The insect hosts spread wide around Respose and every calm delight, At their approach take instant flight; And frantic, o'er the smoking plaia, The bellowing herds rush, wild with pain; The restless steed snorts from afar, As if he snuffed approaching war; The stag, vain plunging through the wood, Flies, by the stinging scourge pursued; E'en man-creation's boasted lord-Finds all his arts no aid afford

To check the onset, or subdue The puny but all-powerful crew. Thick clouds of smoke he bids arise. That with dark folds involve the skies-Would that the winged legions might Be thus prevailed on to take flight To Egypt! whence the plague of flies, In fullest measure first took rise— As once the devil thither fled, By smoke of liver smudges sped! Another portent, lo! appears,

Election time has come again-The Spring that calls a wriggling train Of "Candidates" forth to the field, To try what Fortune there may yield. Ambitious, e ch base wriggler would Fain leave his native depth of mud, Where low pursuits and grovelling ways

Well fitted to awake our fears.

Have long engaged his noteless days; And when he strong and fat has grown, Till now he thinks to burst, full-blown Into the realms of upper day. And flaunt abroad an M. P. P. Electors! rouse you, have a care, Of all the wriggler race beware!

The sunshine of your favor fain Would they with artful jugglings gain Your favor, 'tis, their succor brings, Your votes alone can lend them wings But, when emerged, all free they soa To higher spheres and wider power-What havor marks their dire career! Then does their innate bias appear.

Straight, by their vampire instinct led They on the nation's vitals feed-Self-interest their only law, A race of parasites, they draw Rank sust nance from the public purse-Their country's very bane and curse! Security, with order, flies

At their approach, and Honor dies; Fear stalks forth, hydra-headed wrong, And discord, with her brazen tongue : The nation week, distracted, reels, Crushed with its gathering load of ills. Electors! now's your day, your hour Beware whom ye thus warm to power:

The vampire, viper race eschew-The Cartier-Macdonald crew! Fray that you may not eleve Them from their proper, wriggler state-There they are harmless, wanting stings, But they're the devil-give them wings!

WESTWARD THE COURSE OF EMPIRE TAKES ITS WAY. Hail Empire, glorious gift of Heaven,

Twin brother of our mortal race; Fair child of Paradise, long driven From thy first, holy dwelling place Glad nations hail the joyful day That makes them by thy coming blest Exultant, welcomes thee to sway

Long hast thou dwelt where springs the light of early morn o'er distant lands, ill guided in thy wayward flight Where Hesperus thine advent waits Old Ocean bears thee proudly o'er, And mountains opening wide their gates Proclaim thee to the farthest shore,

Far from the crowd of cringing slaves, That trembling, fall before thy frown, Thy children lead thee o'er the waves, And deck thy brows with Freedom's crown : No feeble race, no bastard brood. The stout, old Anglo-Saxon blood

Ne'er may thy sons true courage lack To go before thee, ne'er delay To follow in thy beaten track Be then an Empire worthier far A holy light, a guiding star,

Thou shalt return with blessings crowned, When thou hast spanned the circling earth, Fulfilled thy long appointed round; Till war's relentless reign shall cease, thou shalt set the nations free Of wisdom, love and liberty.

Then, shining like the noonday sun The star that sage and shepherd led To where a babe, the Holy Ore, Was laid in Bethlehem's lowly bed, Shall stand amid the glowing skies A new, a better world to bless And universal Empire rise
To hail the Sun of Righteousness.

Things Worth Forgetting.

It is almost frightful, and altogether humiliating, to think how much there is in the common on-going in domestic and social life, which deserves nothing but to be instantly and forever forgot. Yet it is equally amusing how large a class seem to have no other business but to repeat and perpetuate these very things. That is the perpetuate these very things. That is the vocation of gossips—an order of society that perpetuates more mischief than all the combined plagues of Egypt together. You may have noticed how many speeches there are, which becomes mischievous by being heard a second time; and what an army of heard a second time; and heard a second fatal repetition shall be had. A Happy Woman.

What spectacle more pleasing does the world afford than a happy woman contented in her sphere, ready all the time to benefit her little world by her exertions, and transforming their briars and thoras of life into the roses of Paradise by the magic of her touch? There are these who are thus happy because they cannot help it—No mis-fortunes dampen their sweet smiles, and they diffuse a cheerful glow around them as they pursue the even tenor of their way. They pursue the secret of contentment, whose value is above the philosopher's stone; for, without seeking the baser exchange of gold, which may buy some sorts of pleasure, they convert everything they touch into joy. What their condition is makes no difference. They may be high or low, rich or poor, admired or forsaken by the fickle world—but the sparkling fountain of happiness bubbles ly beautiful.
