

Leroy Leisure talks about lifestyles

Judy is a first-year phys. ed. student. Since it was her first time away from home, she was timid and shy about making new friends. As the term progressed, she found a number of people with similar interests, and began to enjoy university life. Now, she is involved with tennis, basketball, swimming and she coaches gymnastics. On the weekend she goes out to all the pubs and socializes with all her friends. Judy is looking toward to the summer vacation, but is also keen about next year.

Grant is a recent graduate of UNB. While in school he was enthusiastic about school work and the prospect of getting a good job. His enthusiasm extended to playing rugby, taking pictures for the Bruns, and playing tunes on the guitar. Now his life is empty. Grant lives at home and is unemployed. He has been searching for a job for months, but nothing has come up. He is very discouraged. His days are spent moping around the house, and waiting for the weekends.

Shawn is a SUB rat. He is a second-year arts student. He goes to the SUB at 10 a.m. and grabs a cup of coffee, then sleeps through a couple of classes, scabs his notes, and heads back to the SUB for another cup of coffee. By this time, Shawn is in need of a blast and gets together with his buddies for a smoke. Friday is a good day, Shawn usually heads down for a few beers at the Arms....for the whole weekend. Shawn and his friends talk a lot about things they want to do, but figure they never have enough time or money to do it with.

Are you a Judy, Grant, or Shawn? If you are, would you look forward to your lifestyle. Take a look at your own lifestyle, are you really happy with the way you spend your leisure time? If you feel that something is lacking in your life, it doesn't require much to fill the gap. Each week make a decision to do what you feel is worthwhile. It might be as small as making all your classes for a week, joining a club, or as big as training for the heart marathon, or losing those 20 pounds. Do something worthwhile with your life!

P.S. See you in the blue lounge for the Leisure Talent Festival, today at 1:30 p.m.

Budget raised for summer employment

OTTAWA (CUP)—Minister of Immigration Ron Atkey has announced a new federal summer job creation program designed to create 70,000 jobs at a cost of $110 million.

Last year $108 million was spent by the federal government to create 68,000 summer jobs.

When inflation is taken in account, the new summer creation program is expected to create 2,000 more jobs than the Young Canada Works program instituted by the Liberals with a marked decrease in financing from the federal budget.

The only other major difference between this program and its predecessor is that there will be a 20 per cent increase in financial support to the cadet and armed-forces-reserve training program.

According to Atkey the bulk of the savings on the new program will be made through the streamlining of administrative processes, but the National Union of Students (NUS) notes that wage levels will also drop.

"The wage levels of the jobs are going to decrease sharply," said Morna Ballantyne, executive secretary of NUS. "In the past federal government contributions started at the highest minimum wage in the country, but under this plan students will receive the minimum wage of the province."

Students in Newfoundland, for example, will now be paid less for their summer jobs than students in other provinces. "By doing this he (Atkey) is eliminating the vast majority of students from participating in the program because they will no longer be able to afford to take these jobs," said Ballantyne. "With rising inflation and increases in tuition fees, these wages will not be enough to get them through the academic year," she said.

Lady Godiva ride 'pornographic'?

VANCOUVER—A complaint of sex discrimination has been laid against engineering students at the University of British Columbia whose antics include an annual Lady Godiva ride and publications alleged to be pornographic.

A group representing five women's organizations has taken exception to the publications and the horse ride around campus by a naked woman escorted by a mob of red-sweatered, hooting engineering students.

The complaint to the BC Human Rights Branch says: "The continuing pornographic and sexist publications and activities of the Engineering Undergraduate Society discourage women from entering the engineering department and create a discriminatory climate."

Named in the complaint are UBC president Dr. Douglas Kenny, Dr. Martin Wedepohl, dean of applied science, and Russ Kinghorn, president of the Engineering Undergraduate Society.

The women's groups filing the complaint are the Business and Professional Women's Club, the Council of Women, the Vancouver Status of Women, the BC Federation of Women and The Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

Joan Wallace, an alumni member of the UBC senate and a member of one of the women's groups, said the percentage of women in most male-dominated faculties at UBC has risen dramatically in the past nine years but the number of women in engineering has increased to only six percent in 1979-80 from one per cent in 1970-71.

She said discriminatory activities of engineering students include publication of a newsletter that contains violent anti-women fantasies and pornography as well as intimidation, libel and harassment of women who have spoken out against engineering student's activities.

Miss Wallace said major blame for the situation must be placed on university administration and faculty for failing to speak out against the engineering students despite repeated requests from womens groups.

B.C. students win Jessup law competition

A team of law students from the University of British Columbia captured first place in the Canadian regional round of the Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition, held at UNB Feb. 29 and March 1.

The University of Sherbrooke came second in the competition, while Osgoode Hall law school took third spot.

UNB came seventh in team standings, but was ranked fourth for its memorial, or written argument. Donald Fleming, the UNB team's faculty advisor and organizer of the competition, says UNB defeated the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall individual moots, but lost to Dalhousie and the University of Windsor. Toronto and Osgoode Hall are considered the "two best mooting schools in Canada," he says.

Fourteen Canadian law schools participated in the competition. The UBC team will represent Canada at international finals, to be held in Washington, D.C. later this spring.

Approximately 25 nations participate annually in the Jessup competition, which provides law students with a unique opportunity to argue hypothetical cases of international law.

This year's case involves outer space law and liability for radiation contamination. The case is based in part on the crash of a Cosmos 954 satellite in the Canadian Arctic last winter.

The Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition is sponsored by the American Society for International Law and the Association of Student International Law Societies. Philip C. Jessup, for whom the competition is named, is one of America's most respected jurists on the International Court of Justice. The competition is currently in its 21st year.

WUSC sponsors CARAVAN

CARAVAN: A pleasant reminder of the other side of the world visits UNB-STU. Did you ever wonder what you might see at a market in Asia, Africa, or Latin America? Next week you will get a chance. WUSC (World University Service of Canada) will be sponsoring CARAVAN, a sale of handicrafts from developing nations which travels around Canada.

Amidst the batiks and drums you will find information about some of the problems facing our world due to unequal development of peoples both in the 3rd world and the 1st. Representatives from WUSC, Canada World Youth, and Canadian Crossroads International will be present to give you information on programs you could become involved in here on campus, or overseas. As well as the goods being sold and displayed, the filmed version of Schumacher's Small is Beautiful (named Horizon-The Other Way) will be shown. A slide show by participants in WUSC seminar to Sri Lanka last summer will also be presented.

In these weary months of mid-terms and essays refresh your mind by submersing yourself in the fascination of other cultures. Visit Caravan, look around, buy if you wish, listen, read, learn, take in the movie or slide show. What a break! STU, AD Foyer, Mon, March 17 and Tues, March 18 9-6. UNB, SUB room 26, Wednesday March 19, 12-9.
