

THE GOD-MAN

A Voice from God to God is heard,
Well might it rend the skies,
The Son of God and Man calls out,
With human tears and cries.

"Father I will that they, these men
Whom Thou dost give to me,
May see Thee, God the Father,
Revealed to them, in Me."

Such was His cry in ages past,
Such is His cry to-day,
Yet wise men grope in blindness yet,
"An unknown God," they say.

Unknown and all unknowable—
Yet, "Enoch walked with God,"
And meek souls know from then to now,
"The secret of the Lord."

"Show us the Father," some one cries,
"O show Him, Lord, to me!"
"Child," says the Christ, "who seeth Me,
He doth the Father see."

One day all men shall see Him
All nations own Him Lord,
All peoples bow before Him,
The everlasting God.

"All knowledge with all reverence,
Yield Him eternal Praise,
The Infant of a Day shall see,
The Ancient of all Days."
