PLANETS IN FEBRUARY.—The Full Moon of Jan. 30th passes 4° South of Jupiter on the night of the 1st. Neptune—always invisible—is 90° from the Sun (quadrature) on the 8th. Mars, from being an "Evening Star," comes into conjunction with and passes behind the Sun, on Feb. 11th, becoming a "Morning Star" for the rest of the year. Venus and Mercury are near each other on the morning of the 12th. The waning crescent of the Moon pays court to Venus on the 13th, and Mercury the following morning; the three forming a pretty picture in the early twilight. The giant of the solar system, Jupiter, with his four Moons, comes into a direct line with the Earth and Sun (opposition) on the 19th, passing from a "Morning" to an "Evening Star." The Moon is near Saturn on the 21st, and Jupiter on the 28th. Mars is in perihelion (nearest the Sun) on the latter date.
