

understand, of what these influences are, and what they really amount to.

“Do,” said Mrs. Vernon. “Nothing would be more interesting.”

“Well,” said Glanville, “to-morrow, let us try to arrange a programme. To-morrow is Saturday. We can’t well begin till Monday; for the Bishop won’t go till to-morrow evening; and on Sunday two clergymen are going to solace us with divine service.”

(To be continued.)