the front of the armhole in half, having the two pins together, and put a pin at the half of the folded front; that will give the place for the seam of the sleeve to be put, and where the tacking in of the sleeve should begin.

A USEFUL SCULLERY TIDY

Out of four or more cigar boxes of equal size may be made a very useful "Tidy," in which the various cleaning materials can be stored. Place the boxes so that their lids all hang down in front and glue the boxes together in this position. A coat of dark green enamel outside will greatly improve the appearance of the "Tidy," which should be finished with hangers so that it can hang in a convenient place against the scullery wall.

PAINT ON GLASS

To remove paint from window glass, make a strong solution of potash, saturate the spots of paint with this, and let it remain until it is nearly dry. Then rub it off with a woollen cloth.

MARKING LINEN

When marking linen, first write the name in blacklead pencil, then mark over the pencil with the ink. You will find that the pencil prevents the ink from spreading and looking unsightly, as is so often the case. Always use a new pen for each set of clothes.

TO RENOVATE AN OLD CLOTH DRESS

Unpick at the waistband and unpick enough to allow it to lie flat. Brush very thoroughly, then arrange an ironer's dressboard on two chairs, and get a stiff brush and a basin of hot water containing a little liquid ammonia. Get a piece of clean cloth half a yard square, and have three or four hot irons on the fire. It is important to have these just under scorching point. Spread the dress over the board, dip the cloth in the water, and wring it out as dry as possible. Then spread it like a patch over the dress, smooth it down, and iron quickly with the hottest iron. As soon as the iron has passed over the whole surface of the cloth, tear it off quickly, and while the dress below is steaming brush up the nap with the clothes brush. Repeat the same process over the whole of the dress. The effect is marvellous, and the dress, when done, will look almost a new one.
