As Prisoners Safely Stowed Away in a Deep Hole.

Cronje Was Taking Good Care of Them--His Men Acted Like School Boys After the Surrender.

London, March 2 - With such determined enemies, says a special correspondent telegraphing from Paardeberg, under date of Feb. 27, one would suppose that the Boers would have de-stroyed their gune, small arms and ammunition before surrendering. The only thing injured, however, was a Vickers-Maxim piece, which had been hit by a British shell. A British of-ficer and nine British soldiers, who were prisoners, had been pro ided with deep holes by the Boers, and kindly treated. The Boers inquired anxiously treated. The Boers inquired anxiously whether Bloemfontsin was in possession of the British. When the order came for the Boer prisoners to cross the river to the British camp they took all that they could carry of such things as pots, pans and blankets, throwing their rifles in two heaps that gradually increased to huge propor-tions. As the ford had been swollen by a heavy rain, the Boers took off their trousers and waded across. The scene looked like a play rather than war. The men laughed and splashed each other from the water, but among them were some grim faces, which looked with disfavor on such sportive-

Lord Roberts' advance, have been removed. The news of Gen. Cronje's surrender was received with the greatest jubilation. Trains to Kimberley are now running regularly. The station master at Fourteen Streams passed through here yesterday. He say the Boers under Commandant Duttoit, passing north with a 100-pounder, completely destroyed the bridge and station there. Among the prisoners taken by the British at Paardeberg with Gen. Cronje is a nephew of the Berlin chief of police, Lieut. Von Heister, formerly a member of one of the Prussian regi-

A LIMBURGER SYMPHONY.

How the Grocer Caused Trouble by His Generosity.

I was at the corner grocer's last Satarday. The boss behind the counter made me a present of something wrapped in a piece of silver paper, which he told me was a piece of limburger cheese. When I got outside the shop I opened the paper, and when I smelt what was inside I felt tired. I took it home and put it in the coal shed. In the morning I went to it again. It was still there. Nobody had taken it. I wondered what I could do with it. Father and mother were getting ready to go to church. I put a piece in the back pocket of father's pants, and another piece in the lining of ma's muff. I walked behind when we started for

When we got in church and after singng the first hymn, mother told father not to sing again, but to keep his mouth shut and breathe through his nose. After prayer perspiration stood on father's face, and the people in the next pew to ours got up and went out. After the next hymn, father whispered to mother that she had better go out. After the second lesson, some of the church wardens came around to see if there were some stray rats in the church. Some more people near our pew got up and went out, puttting their handkerchiefs to their noses as they went. The parson said they had better close the service, and hold a meeting outside to discuss the sanitary condition of the church. Father told mother that they had better go home one at a time. When they got home they both went into the front room, but did not speak for some time. Mother spoke first and told father to put the cat out of the rooom, as she thought it was going to be sick. It was sick before father could get it out. Mother then turned round and noticed that the canary was dead. Mother told father not to sit so near the fire, as it made matters worse. Just then the servant came in and asked if she should open the windows, as the room smelt very close. Father went upstairs and changed his clothes and had a hot Mother took father's clothes and offered them to a tramp, who said, "Thanks, kind lady, they're a bit too high for me." Mother threw them over the back fence into the canal. Father was summoned afterward for poisoning the fish. Next morning father had a note sent him. Father came to wish me "Good night" at ten o'clock with the note in one hand and a razor strap in the other. The people next door thought we were beating carpets in our house. I cannot sit down comfortably yet. I have given my little sister what I had left of that limburger cheese. I thought it a pity to waste it.-Berlin,

16 Cut Ab appea To cut an apple into two or more pieces without also dividing the skin seems an impossible feat, but that it can be performed with comparative ease anybody following the directions here given will testify. Apples are so common a fruit that they figure on every well organized dinner table, and the little trick, when performed as an after dinner feat, is really quite start-

An apple with a firm, smooth skin should be selected. Take a long, slender darning needle and thread it with silk or cotton. Linen thread is perhaps the best, as it is not so liable to break. Begin at the stem and take a long stitch under the skin of the apple, being careful not to go so deep that the point of the needle does not readily emerge. Take another stitch in the same direction, sewing right around the apple, exactly as you would cut it in half. When the thread comes out again rear the stem, take the two ends in each hand, cross them and pull steadily. The thread will, of course, cut the apple in two, leaving no mark on the skin, and without breaking it beyond the tiny holes made by the needle, which are quite invisible.

By repeating, the performance in different parts of the apple it may be ent into quarters and eighths, and on being peeled will fall into these sec tions.

Lobster a la Newburg.

Take two lobsters and pick out all the meat. Pick or cut this into one inch lengths. Put the meat in a sauce pan over a very hot fire with a little more than a tablespoon of butter. Season with salt to taste and add a good pinch of red pepper. Cook for five minutes and add a wine glass of Madeira wine. Beat the yolks of three eggs with a pint of sweet cream and pour over the lobster. Let it cook un-til it thickens well. Be careful that it does not burn.

LERIGH VALLEY RAILROAD

Trans-Atllantic travel has reached point where all the discomforts that used to exist years ago in connection with the little details of arranging trips are no longer known, the railroads and steamship companies fur-nishing facilities that remove any difficulty whatever, and making it very easy and simple for a passenger to omplete his arrangements. The Lehigh Valley Railroad has made it a custom for some years of having passenger representatives located at New York city meet all incoming passenger steamers from Eu-ropean ports, and also passengers arriving by its trains, who are going abroad; and in fact, attend to all business in connection with arranging for hotel accommodations, sleeping or parlor car tickets and the checking of baggage, etc., etc., that is necessary for passengers destined to points beyond New York via the Lehigh Valw Line, or the transfer to steamers f passengers and baggage, looking afr steamship accommodations, etc. Mr. Charles, A. Foucart, who is the Steamship Passenger Agent repre-senting the Lehigh Valley Railroad, s always on hend to meet incoming steamers, and will also meet parties on arrivat of Lehigh Valley trains, to ee to their comfortable transfer to the steamship. Mr. Foucart is a thoroughly experienced man, and his manner of performing any service for passengers is so cheerful, that it is n reality a pleasure for one just coming off: a long stemmship trip, to meet
