What Mothers are Doing.

I know what mothers are doing to-night, Loving mothers all over the land : I can see the children in spotless white, Round many a happy fireside etand, "Tis Saturday night, and rosy and sweet, Each from a bath like a flower from rain, Pattering about with little bare feet, And trailing night dresses free from stain.

I know what mothers are doing to-night, Hearing some dear little scholar recite
Lesson or text from Sabbath-schoel. Laying out ready wee jackets and caps,

Seeing that shoes and stockings are right, Gloves and collars and cosy wraps— That's what mothers are doing to-night. Patiently mending some little torn dress, Sighing to think no better is there; Putting down needle and thread, to cares Little ones bending beside her in prayer

Praying herself, as she busily sews, Now a button, now a tear; It's on Saturday night a mother knows

The sweetest side of a mother's carc. On Saturday night, when the children slee And father sits by the fire at rest. The angels give her a thought to keep,

And she feels that a mother's love is blest. She tenderly talks of their future days, Telling of all they have said and done.
