COINCIDENCES.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"I used to know that woman," said the author-man, pointing to a double-column cut in the newspaper of a well known dress who had just gotten her second divorce; "she used to live across the street from me."

"And look here," he went on, pointing out a little paragraph at the bottom of the page about a man who was suing the city for damages. "I used to know him, too. He was my Sunday School teacher, once."

"It's really peculiar," he concluded, as he folded the paper up and tossed it on the table, "how often I see things about people I know in the newspapers."

The man-who-thinks had been listening idly, but he came to life at that. "Do you really think you see a great many names which you know," he asked, "or that they seem many because they make more impression on you?"

The author-man was most indignant at that hypothesis and they went off into a heated argument.

Which would you have sided with? Personally, I agree with the man who thinks.

And in the light of his theory, I recalled to mind a similar coincidence which may be explained in the same way.

You have doubtless noticed that if you learn a new word or hear some new name, you will immediately run across that new word or name several times.

And you have probably remarked upon that as a coincidence.

But is it?

Isn't it the most natural thing in the world?

In all probability that word or name didn't begin to come into your line of vision at just that time. It had undoubtedly been there all the while, only you hadn't noticed it before. You had looked at it but you hadn't seen it. We look at a vast number of things which we don't really see. Then in some way your attention was called to it and after that you saw it every time you looked at it.

For instance, a friend of mine told me he was going to have a certain artist draw him a picture for an advertisement he was getting out. I had never happened to hear that artist's name before. The next day I saw one of his pictures in a magazine I was reading and since then I have noticed at least half a dozen pieces of his work and seen two mentions of him in the newspapers. Now it isn't likely that his work never came into my ken before. I had undoubtedly looked at his drawings with the name clearly written down in the corner again and again. But I hadn't noticed the name. After I had my attention called to it I noticed it every time.

But it wasn't a coincidence; it was just logical cause and effect.

Of course coincidences do happen, but I fancy that if we chose to try, we could find logical explanations of what appear to be coincidences a great deal oftener than we do.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has exceeded Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, manna and queen's root with black cherry bark.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Household Notes.

The top of a child's stocking is usually the first place to show signs of wear. If the new stockings are lined down as far as the knee, the garter fastening will not tear it so quickly. Do not fasten the lining at the lower edge, as this would make an ugly seam.

To keep suet, remove the skin, put it in a saucepan and place on a warm fire. Let the suet melt gradually. When melted, pour into a pan of cold water. When hard, wipe it dry, wrap it in a piece of white paper, then in a piece of line. Store in a cool place and when wanted it may be rubbed on a grater.

Every gardener will appreciate a kneeling board. It can be used when planting, weeding or cultivating the flowers. It is made from a piece of wood, 12 x 24 inches, under one long edge nail, with a support three or four inches high to keep the board at a comfortable angle. The upper surface of the board should be padded.

Potato omelet is delicious. Take a large, freshly baked potato and scoop out the inside. Beat this until smooth and mix with it half a teaspoonful of paprika or white pepper, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dessert spoonful of lemon juice and the yolks of four eggs. A minute or two before the omelet is fried fold in the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth. Fry in a well-greased, very hot pan and serve in a hot dish.

The Great Drama of the Pacific Coast

A fresh act is being played to-day in that great human drama on the Pacific Coast. The Californians want to prevent the Japanese from owning their land, and they seek to pass a Bill to that effect, making it illegal for "aliens ineligible to citizenship" to own land. Hence possible trouble with Japan.

There is a growing conviction in "Japan," says the Times, "claims that question involves 'the whole issue of her status among civilized nations.' 'Japan,' says the Times, 'claims that her people should be exempt from anti-Asiatic legislation and be entitled to the same privileges as the white race.' Japan proposes to submit a test case to the United States Supreme Court.

What the Japanese Say.

"The Japanese deny that they are of Mongolian origin, and claim that by their adoption of Western civilization and by the signal successes of their arms on land and sea, they have earned the right to substantial relief from the disabilities which still often beset the Asiatic in other lands. The issue is so fraught with possibilities of acrimonious discussion that we earnestly hope it may be avoided," says the Times.

"The action of the Californian Legislature only represents one phase of the rising alarm in the United States at the growth of large populations not akin in spirit and tradition to the original founders of the American nation. Upon the solid mass of ten million negroes there has been superimposed a dense layer of backward peoples from Southern and Eastern Europe, and the white races in the Western States have the additional dread of competition from Asia, by folk who can 'under-live' the white man.

"The English-speaking peoples and the type of civilization, manners, morals, and beliefs which they represent, stand for a cause—the preservation of America as a white man's, or at any rate a white and black man's country," says the Nation.

"What California is clearly working up to is an absolute embargo, such as has already been laid on the Chinese, on the immigration of all Japanese of the coolie and artisan class. Her immediate and material interests by no means favour such a policy. California wants labour above everything else, and enough white labour is not to be had. The foundations of the State's development, her railways, irrigation, and reclamation works, were made possible by the influx of Chinese labourers. When that influx was stopped by legislation, the Japanese began to pour in.

"They have now filled the gap left vacant by the Chinese. As farm hands, fruit pickers, domestic servants, and railway workers, their services are not only sought after; they are indispensable. They form a law-abiding, intelligent, industrious colony. They have most of the economic virtues of the Chinese, and few or none of their moral failings; and nothing in the nature of a Japanese 'China-town' has ever existed in San Francisco. They are rarely drunken or disorderly. They go to America merely to work. They never become a charge on the treasury, or beg in the streets, or meddle with politics, or concern themselves in any way with governmental or religious institutions and strifes, but lead a separate, harmless life, leaving the country when they have hoarded enough to provide for the remainder of their days.

Japanese Industry.

"As scientific farmers and market-gardeners they put Americans to shame; and if California were to repatriate to-morrow every Asiatic within her boundaries, her material progress would hardly recover from the blow in twenty years. There is hardly a housewife on the Pacific Coast, or an employer of labor, or an agriculturist who would not suffer by their exclusion.

"It seems, however, to be the fact that in such trades and industries as both races practice, the industry, thrift, and lower standard of living of the Oriental drive his Caucasian rival to the wall."

CRYSTAL GAZING FAMILY GOES MAD.

Paris, May 10.—The danger of consulting a crystal gazer has just met with a terrible tragic illustration in the little village of Saint Remy in the department of Deux Seveves.

The trouble began with the death of a pig that died without apparent cause on M. Gauthier's farm. The owner consulted a sleepwalker who had the reputation of being a clairvoyant, and who, after gazing into her crystal, declared that evil spirits had entered the Gauthier house and unless they were driven forth all the farm stock would perish and the family become mad.

The village priest was at once asked to come and exorcise the demons. He refused, saying that the church would not stoop to co-operate with a crystal gazer.

The other morning the whole family went suddenly mad, one of the daughter's being first afflicted with hallucinations. The sons went to the priest's house, and brought him by force to the farm, where he was shut up and ordered to pray. Meanwhile the Gauthier family armed with torches and cudgels pursued the evil spirits through the rooms.
