CARSON SPEAKS.

BELFAST, To-day.

Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Union Party, outlines an Ulster programme for the future. In addressing the Unionist Council yesterday, he said: I propose when the war is over, to summon a Provisional Government, and I propose that their first act should be to repeal the Home Rule Bill. So far as Ulster is concerned, I propose in the same act to enact that it is the duty of the volunteers to see that no act or no attempt to enact under that Bill should ever have effect in Ulster. A Central News despatch from Rome says the following telegram received from Petrograd says: The right wing of the Austrians has been driven back beyond Carpathia into Hungary where they are being pursued by Russians. The Austrian debacle is complete, and they have lost all their artillery. The Austrian left wing has retreated to Cracow. The Russians have captured another of the forts at Premysl.

GERMAN ATTACKS FAIL.

LONDON, To-day.

For the first time since the beginning of the war, wireless news, circulated by the French Government through the Eiffel Tower, was received in London last night. The message dated Sept. 28th, is as follows: "Feeling that their position was becoming more and more critical under the pressure of the Allies, the Germans have tried to stop us by repeated counter attacks. Since Sept. 26th they have delivered by day and night frequent violent attacks at several positions on our front. Everywhere they have been repulsed, sustaining considerable losses and abandoning as they lay thousands of dead and wounded. Eight army corps and guards were severely put to the test and large numbers of prisoners fell into our hands. It is to be remarked that many of the latter gave themselves up voluntarily. It seems that German soldiers are beginning to have no further doubt as to the treatment which awaits them in captivity. At the beginning all those we had captured had a terrified and supplicating attitude, arising out of statements made by their officers to the effect that the French shot prisoners. It is rather by an excess of kindness that we transgress in regard to them, and the kindly treatment which is meted out to prisoners in certain districts of France has even evoked complaint, which has occasionally been justified on the part of those who know how our own men are treated in Germany."

A Summer Tale.

"You look irritated this evening."

"I am—on warm days like this I always suffer from heat rash."

"I am liable to heat rash, too, but it never irritates me; it never has since I began to use Zylax, which at once allays the irritation, physical and mental. And I find Zylax Soap with the Ointment go far to prevent heat rash altogether."

Zylax sells at 50 cents a box; Zylax Soap at 25 cents a cake, at your Druggist.

Fads and Fashions.

Some of the new fur coats are long waisted, being made on the lines of the basque dress.

The most fashionable colors of this season's dress goods are reflected in the new ribbons.

Very beautiful is the white satin gown trimmed with a combination of black and white lace.

Black and white combinations and soft rich colors will be in favor for afternoon costumes.

Small neckwear of marten and lynx, also ermine and white coney, will be much in demand.

The smartest afternoon frocks will be a combination of velvet and tulle trimmed with fur.

With the coming of the heavier materials for colder weather, the plain basque will have its day.

Lights Out For 1,800 Miles.

"A thrilling story is told by Mr. Fred Trussell, manager of the London Hippodrome, of his voyage from Mogador in the Royal Mail steam packet Agadir," says the Dispatch.

"No timid citizen need be afraid that England can be surprised by the invader," he says. "By what I have seen myself I can believe that from Land's End to Dover not a rowing boat could pass without observation day or night."

"After leaving Mogador we heard by wireless that England had declared war against Germany, and you can imagine the effect it had upon us all. It did not seem likely that we should be able to escape the German cruisers which we had good reason to believe were patrolling the western coast of Africa, and to add to our dismay within an hour of our hearing of the declaration of war, our Captain received a message from the Admiralty ordering us to sail with all lights out."

"Going to Board You."

"We reached Las Palmas in beautiful weather, and found fifteen German trading ships, all prizes of war, in the harbour guarded by British cruisers. These ships, we heard, together with eighteen others in Tenerife, and eight or ten in Madeira, had been caught like so many rats in a trap. They had sailed out port for visualising and coaling purposes, all unaware of what was going to happen to them."

"Well, we continued our voyage, a spectre ship, with all speed northwards, and struck very dirty weather, which did not add to our happiness. On the fifth day after leaving Mogador we arrived in the Bay of Biscay, and then the real fun began. All day long was a succession of shocks, war vessels being constantly seen and our wireless continually receiving questions. We again tapped a German cruiser's message, but were baffled by the code."

"On Saturday (August 15) we turned the corner off Ushant, and then things came along very quickly. First we were circled and then interrogated by a small French cruiser. Three big battleships and a cruiser approached, divided, and disappeared over the horizon north and south. Then a great battleship came steaming towards us. As she drew nearer there was no means of discovering her nationality, for her flag, if she flew one, was right aft, and owing to her position in relation to our own ship we could see no distinguishing mark. As she came closer she signalled asking who we were, what were our passengers, and our cargo. Eventually she stopped, and ran up the signal, 'We are going to board you!' At this point, when our imaginations were at fever heat, she swung round slightly, and we saw she was flying the French flag!"

"Our pent-up feelings broke loose, and we cheered lustily as we watched a boat being lowered and twelve sailors in cork jackets taking the oars, with two officers in the stern. The officers came aboard, and shortly after a message came to me from the captain asking if I would act as interpreter. I was only too delighted, of course, to assist at such a historical occasion as the boarding of a British mail boat by French naval officers on the high seas."

"As we entered the Channel we were passed along from one warship to another—first French ships challenging us, then English ones. Just before dark on Saturday (15th) we sighted the English coast, and at the same time received a wireless message from the Admiralty telling us to bring up in Caswand Harbour.

A Tremendous Sight.

"As dark fell a tremendous sight met our view. Everywhere the eye could rest, at apparently intervals of yards, searchlights swept every inch of the sea. It was simply dazzling, and it appeared to make navigation almost impossible. On this evening, for the first time in nine days, we lit our port, starboard and mast-head lights."

"Great excitement prevailed when we were finally shown an anchorage by a naval officer who came alongside. Thanking our lucky stars that we were, as we thought at the end of our adventures, we went to bed, only to be aroused at two o'clock in the morning by a hail from a Government ship alongside: 'You must shift your vessel at once; you are anchored within the line of fire!'"

"As we were entirely unaware of the state of things ashore, we thought a bombardment was imminent! The donkey engines were put to work to raise the anchors, and we moved on to a safer position to which we were directed. At daybreak the authorities removed our wireless and all our connections, and we set sail up the English Channel under conditions which, I believe, have never before been matched in the history of this or any other country."

Cartierhall, Nfld.

Dear Sirs, White in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disgraced for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes. Yours truly,

W. A. V. H.

Patriotic Social.

George St. Epworth League was to the front last night by entertaining in the League room those from the League and Church who have responded to the Empire's call and are soon to go abroad with the Nfld. Regiment to fight England's cause of righteousness against German militarism. A very interesting programme was presided over by the President, Mr. Wilfred Whiteway, who in a few remarks welcomed the ladies to the League room and encouraged them in the noble stand which they had taken. The opening prayer was delivered by the Rev. Stenlake, who is a volunteer. The solos were appropriate and well rendered. Miss Flossie Whiteway's rendering of the popular ballad, "A Heart Cry from the West," was very pleasing; also "Athena Mine," by Mr. Jack Spooner. The "Death of Nelson," rendered in good style by Mr. S. J. Tucker, concluded the solo part. A very pleasing feature was a recitation given by Mrs. Guy, wife of the pastor, who displayed in an admirable way her power as an elocutionist. A short address was given by Rev. N. M. Guy, who in well chosen words and in a very patriotic style dealt with the great National War now being waged, explaining Germany's aim for the past twenty years, and also explained England's call to arms to retain national honour and her own exaltation, and in giving the lady encouragement, reminded them that while fighting against the Germans they were fighting for them, as the crushing of German militarism meant freedom to her own people, and if England was crowned with success in this, the greatest battle in history, it would mean peace for a long period, if not for all time. At the conclusion of the address the young ladies passed around the dainties they had prepared of tea, cake, fruit, etc., which was enjoyed by all present. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close an evening well spent and long to be remembered.—Com.
