Piles of It!

Mr. Toothe Had Plenty of Election Cash.

Admits He Spent $900 Over His Salary.

Which Was Not Included in the Official Returns.

Mr. Osler Charges Him With Criminal Misdemeanor.

But Mr. Toothe Says He Was Ignorant of the Law.

Ingenious Explanation of the Remarkable Telegrams.

Says the Parcel to Wigmore Contained Literature.

Denies It Was the Bank of Montreal Brand.

It Was to be Distributed at Once on Arrival.

Claims There Was No One in the Attic the Morning After the Election—Only a Barrel and a Ham—Over Which Three Men Were Keeping Guard—Amusing Developments of His Cross-Examination.

The following is a continuation of the examination of Mr. Toothe by Mr. Hellmuth:

Witness remembered Pat Moore and Pat O'Hearn coming to see him once in the day. Witness looked up the voters' lists for them. Witness did not recollect Tracey and Moore coming to him subsequently, and it was absolutely untrue that Moore had sworn that witness had promised him money to vote, neither had witness authorized Tracey to give Moore any money. Witness denied Oliver Richardson's story that he had been introduced by Tracey to witness, and that witness had asked Richardson to give them a lift. Witness had given Richardson work, but never spoke to him about his money. Witness had never been canvassed for Beattie with Tracey, as sworn to by a witness named Sherlock. Toothe said he met Tracey by accident on Cheapdale street and also meeting Sherlock, canvassed him for his vote, but Tracey did not open his mouth. He had not gone to Cheapdale street for a walk. (Laughter.)

THE LAST OF THE ATTIC.

Mr. Hellmuth said he had finished examining Mr. Toothe about the attic and would now proceed to the Detroit charges.

Mr. Hellmuth then asked Mr. Toothe about certain telegrams. Toothe had telegraphed to Wigmore that he had expressed a parcel to him. This was a parcel of literature. (Much laughter.)

Tooth's telegram to J. H. B. Toote, Sandwich, telling him to come to London at once was produced. Witness said this telegram was private, and had nothing to do with the election.

"DON'T TOUCH WHITE."

The next was witness' famous telegram to Graydon, Detroit, "Don't touch White."

Witness explained that he had heard Graydon had been speaking to White in Detroit. "I was afraid Graydon might induce White to leave the election to vote, so I wired him to let him alone. I was afraid White might not vote right." (Much laughter.)

Another telegram, Toothe to Gray-

don, read: "Don't pay Pepper." Toothe said this referred to a claim for $15 made by one Pepper for services rendered the Conservative Association at the Court of Revision. Pepper was not entitled to it, but said he would not come to London to vote unless he got it. Hence the telegram.

Another telegram, Toothe to Harold Richardson, read: "Tell Harvey to come at once."

Witness remembered nothing about the circumstances of that message. I remember sending it; probably I did it under instructions.

A long argument ensued between Mr. Osler and Mr. Robinson, the former objecting to the admission of Mr. Toothe's evidence, which was intended to contradict the witness Ryckman, who signed a document in Toothe's presence, but who claimed that Toothe read it so rapidly that he (Ryckman) hardly understood it.

Mr. Osler contended that this would be collateral testimony, and admitted he (Mr. Osler) would have the right to call other witnesses to refute Toothe.

Their lordships retired to deliberate, and on returning five minutes later, said they would receive evidence, subject to objection.

Mr. Osler's lordships will allow me to call witnesses on the point raised.

Judge Ferguson—Perhaps you will not need to call any.

Mr. Hellmuth resumed his examination. Witness said he had carefully read and re-read the statement to Ryckman, and told him if it was not true, not to sign it.

MR. TOOTHE'S VIRTUOUS INDIGNATION.

Mr. Hellmuth asked witness about the midnight pot-voy in witness' office, which Ryckman had described in court. Ryckman had sworn that Toothe drilled him in the story he was told the court about, the Lockington affair.

Tooth denied he had told Ryckman that "No, sir," so as to make an impression on the judges.

"Those statements are malicious falsehoods. They are beneath my dignity," said Mr. Toothe, with a magnificent air of virtuous indignation.

"THE LESS SAID THE BETTER."

Witness also denied that he made the remark about the judges being "good Tories."

Judge Ferguson—The less said about that the better.

Witness said Ryckman's conversation had reference almost entirely to Fitzhugh's evidence. Witness denied Payne's statement that he had put money in Payne's pocket. On May 23 he had lent Payne $10. Payne came to him drunk and crying, and asked for a ticket to go to Detroit, as he had no work, and wanted to get his job in Detroit. Witness gave Charles McMillan money, telling him to buy a ticket for Payne and put him on the train. Witness did not mention vote to Payne; the latter was too drunk to know whether he had a vote or not.

Witness denied Springer's statement that he (Springer) had met witness near the Bank of Toronto one day, and he (Tooth) had said to him, "Remember, I gave you no money." Witness had spoken to Springer, but Springer said he (Tooth) gave him nothing.

TOOTHE'S FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS.

Cross-examined by Mr. Osler, witness said he had paid out $900 for the election over and above his salary. He had been promised a salary, but it had not been paid. He did not know whether his being a professional man had anything to do with his appointment or not. The money paid out were used for the Conservative Association.

Q—For the purpose of Mr. Beattie's election?

Witness supposed so.

Q—You had a large personal discretion?

Witness said any money he paid out were on order or on his own volition. He had been treasurer? Mr. Graydon was treasurer?

A—He was only treasurer in name. I didn't see much of him.

Q—It was handy for you to have the money around?

A—Yes. (Laughter.)

Q—You paid rents for committee rooms?

A—Yes.

Q—You paid O'Hearn and a good many others for care-taking?

A—Yes.

Q—You paid for some printing, too?

A—Yes.

Witness also paid for clerical services and distributing literature and notices.

Q—Nearly all the money you paid was paid for voters?

A—If so, I didn't know it.

Q—You knew that above all others who attended to the voters' lists?

A—I was there.

Q—Did you know Dan O'Hearn had a vote?

A—I think Dan, Jun., had a vote; also John.

Witness said Payne and Gillett had votes.

CHARGED WITH MISDEMEANOR.

Q—All this money you paid out was that returned as part of the legitimate expenses of Major Beattie to his constituency?

A—I never handed in any statement.

Q—Did you vote?

A—Yes.

MR. TOOTHE AS A KNOW-NOTHING.

Q—You were aware that neither yourself nor O'Hearn had any right to vote?

A—I didn't know.

Q—Did you not know that these expenses should have been returned under the fifth section of the act?

A—I know it now—from yourself and Mr. Robinson. (Laughter.)

Q—Did you not know that if these expenses had been returned by the proper officer, the statutory agent, that it would have voided the election?

A—No.
