COCKSHUTT OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR BECK SANATORIUM FUND

Plans For $500,000 Endowment Drive Are Announced at Luncheon, Attended by Many Prominent Citizens of Ontario—Several From London Are Guests.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.
Toronto, Nov. 17.—As guests at luncheon of the lieutenant-governor Hon. Col. Cockshutt, two score prominent citizens of Ontario met today at government house to further the plans for the campaign to raise $500,000, as an endowment for the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium as a memorial to the late Sir Adam Beck.

Seated on the right of the lieutenant-governor was His Grace Archbishop McNeill, while on his left was Rev. Dr. H. J. Cody. Also present were Mayor Foster, Chairman C. A. McGrath of the Ontario Hydro-Electric commission, ex-Mayor C. A. Maguire, John O'Connor, chairman of the campaign committee, P. W. Ellis, E. R. Wood, T. W. Duggan, Finance Commissioner G. H. Ross, William Guelph, W. K. Sanderson, St. Thomas; Philip Peacock, London; E. V. Buchanan, London; P. B. Yates, St. Catharines.

His honor in opening said that he heartily welcomed his guests for such a purpose. "We are not going to ask you for subscriptions today, but to have a little talk over this proposal that we may see it properly launched," he said.

"We have been erecting monuments to war heroes," began Archbishop McNeill. "We now have a chance to honor a peace hero. Not in marble or bronze, but in a living and everlasting benevolence, Sir Adam was a peace hero. His work was for the people. He might, with his genius and that tremendous energy of his, have amassed a fortune, but he devoted his life to the interests of the people."

Dr. Cody outlined the purpose of the memorial fund and said the sentimental reason that Sir Adam had been so wrapped up in the sanatorium work would have a powerful appeal to the public.

Col. Leonard Speaks.
Col. Ibbotson Leonard of London gave facts and figures regarding the deaths from tuberculosis in Canada had a much lower rate than the European nations or New York. Ten years ago the death rate in Canada was 125 per 100,000 and it had been kept down to 86. Yet in 1923 there had been 7,500 deaths from tuberculosis.

He outlined the situation at the sanatorium. On one class of patients there was a deficit of 75 cents a day, on others $2.25 a day. "We have had deficits of from $25,000 to $30,000 a year," he said. "We had Sir Adam Beck to help carry the load. He is no longer with us. It so happens that just now we are not in debt—we just have a healthy mortgage, but it was Sir Adam's last wish that the doors of the hospital should never be closed to the poor patients who could not pay for treatment."

The colonel declared that the wealth of poverty of the individual patient made no difference at the sanatorium so far as the tests and X-ray plates and so on were concerned. There had been 325 children in the institution and never a death among them.

He told of the last visit Sir Adam made to the sanatorium. "He shouldn't have been there at all in his condition, but I could not get him to go home. There he was leaning on Dr. Pratt and myself. He said to me, 'Oh, I wish I could only live long enough to see that this work can be carried on indefinitely. To me it seems a sacred duty.'"

Mr. Leonard sent his regrets at being unable to attend the luncheon.

Honor to Peace Hero.
"We have been erecting monuments to war heroes," began Archbishop McNeill. "We now have a chance to honor a peace hero. Not in marble or bronze, but in a living and everlasting benevolence, Sir Adam was a peace hero. His work was for the people. He might, with his genius and that tremendous energy of his, have amassed a fortune, but he devoted his life to the interests of the people."

Dr. Cody outlined the purpose of the memorial fund and said the sentimental reason that Sir Adam had been so wrapped up in the sanatorium work would have a powerful appeal to the public.

TRUSTEES PROUD AS SOD IS TURNED

Regard Building of Memorial Collegiate as Move in Unit Plan.

Proponents of the unit system in the London collegiate institute realized the first step in that direction, when Trustee S. F. Lawrason, chairman of the board of education, officially turned the sod of the new Sir Adam Beck Memorial high school at the corner of Dundas street and Highbury avenue yesterday afternoon.

The fact that the building of the new east-end collegiate, costing $280,000 or more, settles for all time the question of the unit system, which, as the chairman stated, has agitated the board for the past five years, predominated in each and all of the addresses made during the short ceremony.

In turning the sod in the presence of numerous members of the board and officials, Mr. Lawrason took credit for this year's board of education, which had accomplished a task which had proved insurmountable to boards in the past. He stated that the unit plan also that the new school is being built with the employment of made-in-London material and London labor to such a large degree, and claimed that the school will mean much in the development of the east end of the city.

Trustee J. I. A. Hunt stated that while he had always opposed the unit system he was glad that the school was being built so large, and that it was in this adopting the unit system would be fully justified in future years.

Principal E. A. Miller, M.A., voiced his strong belief in the unit system and commented upon the splendid opportunities lying immediately before the students of the new school when it is opened. Mr. Miller declared that the school opens, which it is hoped will take place next fall, the attendance will justify the size of the building.

A. E. O'Neill, B.A., principal of the present east collegiate on Princess avenue, and who will be the principal of the new school when it is opened, stated that in his opinion the city is going to get the best value for its money in the new school that the board has ever got in school construction. Mr. O'Neill added that the teachers and students of the east collegiate and also the residents of the east end of the city are deeply grateful to this year's board for putting through the new building.

Robert Rider, president of the east Collegiate Parent association, also spoke on behalf of east-end residents, endorsing Principal O'Neill's remarks.
