GLADSTONE'S ACTION.

London, June 21 .- The Liberal leaders re endeavoring to mitigate the effects of Mr. Gladstone's reported surrender of his pair at the House of Commons, but it is unquestionably the most extraordinary of the many extraordinary acts in the great statesman's career. It promises to withdraw in extreme contumely his support from the extreme contumely his support from the government which inherited his own control

The truch is that Mr. Gladstone is even more of a churchman then a Liberal, and in old age he cannot follow his party in what napp must eventually result in the separation of the church and state in England as well as in Wales. He had pledged himself to dis-establishment in Wales, but apparently has repented of it. As he is on the steamship Tantalion Castle, at Kiel, even his nearest Tantalion Castle, at Kiel, even his nearest friends have apparently failed to get an explanation from him. But the following statement has been made on his behalf:

Since his retirement Mr. Gladstone has never voted in the House of Commons, but his vote has been paired against that of Mr. Villiers, a Unionist, and the "father of the house," who is too infirm to attend its sittings. Some weeks ago Mr. Gladstone told Lord Tweedmouth, who is staying with him at Hawarden, that as there were some Mr. Campbell-Bannerman's resignation cannot be accepted.
