she had to say was: "Baby's got a tooth that Stroud could not challenge after the referee had called 'dead bird.' Referee decided in Cockburn's favor, ruling Stroud's challenge out. Stroud continued to shoot under protest on that decision. After another shot was fired, a man went to gather the bird in dispute, when it proved that the referee's decision was wrong by it spreading its wings and soaring off. Still the bird was counted to Cockburn. If he had not had it added to his score, it will be observed that the match would have been a tie. The rules allow three minutes in which to challenge opponent's bird. Stroud finished the interview with the reporter by saying: "I won't give up the money to Cockburn, but let the public know that I informed him and his friends that I am willing to meet him in another match for $200 ($100 added to present stakes in Mr. Nelson's hands), and have it take place at some point between here and Toronto. CAPITAL . $1,250,000.

The prevalent idea of the public seems to be that unless they are engaged in some hazardous occupation, or are frequently traveling by rail, driving fast horses, hunting, shooting, skating, boating, bicycle riding, or going up in balloons, they are not liable to accidents. No greater delusion, however, could exist, for while every occupation has its peculiar risks by far the greater number of claims for compensation are caused by slips, falls, bruises, cuts, sprains, burns, broken bones, and such like.

Hefore you get hurt, therefore, get an Accident Policy from this old Established and Reliable Company.
