

Miscellaneous.

Collins in Bright Colors. THE FASHION HAS DEVELOPED IN SAN FRANCISCO AS AN OFFSET TO GLOOM.

They are distinctly progressive on the Pacific coast. It has long been suspected, but now there is no doubt of it, for the San Francisco Call announces, with manifest pride, a decided advance in floral costumes.

"For some time past," says the Call, "there has been a desire to make these costumes less dismal than formerly. Flowers and bright colors have been demanded instead of darkness and despair."

The result of this much thinking he devised a gown, covered not with gloomy black, but with a handsome blue and gray cloth, the colors longitudinally in wide stripes.

This, he concluded, would attract the popular notion, being neat and elegant and not too gaudy, for while the whole effect was light and airy, the colors chosen were still emblematic of the more sombre shades of human feeling.

Still, it was with some perturbation that the undertaker plied the novelty in his show-window. He was surprised and gratified to have a customer for it the same day.

He would have nothing else that the undertaker, or, indeed, the city, had to offer. It was not so sad looking, he remarked, as those black coffins.

At the funeral the undertaker noted the effect with anxious eye. The blue and gray outfit made a sensation, to be sure, but it looked well among the flowers (carefully selected to harmonize), and the undertaker heard no word, or saw no look, save that of admiration.

He immediately made another, which, likewise, sold the day it was put in the window. Then orders began to come in and other undertakers began to copy.

Metzler was at first embarrassed to make one in sky blue and white stripes, and it was sold within an hour.

Throwing Rice and Slippers. TWO PRETTY CUSTOMS, BORROWED OF SENTIMENTALITY, HAVE BECOME AN ANNOYANCE.

In the September Ladies' Home Journal Edward W. Bok notes the abuse of the pretty custom of casting a small parcel of rice or a dainty slipper after a departing bride and groom—an unspoken Godspeed.

"The dainty slipper," he also says, "has been transformed into the old shoe of doubt, origin, and thrown with force and accuracy, causing a good deal of discomfort."

And this is the case with the rice, which two pretty customs have degenerated into. They have been vulgarized, and, therefore, the sooner they pass into disuse the better.

The sentiment of the custom has been lost. Rice and shoes are no more omens of good fortune. The modern thrower of them has transformed them into missiles with which to annoy the bride and groom.

The better class of people have already begun to substitute a shower of rose petals, and this new and far more beautiful idea is rapidly being followed.

We might have preserved the old custom, as it is in the hands of the promiscuous rice-throwing and the casting of old shoes at weddings will be left to the bores of our modern society, into whose hands these acts have fallen, and who seem happiest when they can convert the graceful old times into practical jokes.

The Sensible Woman. A sensible woman begins very early in life to show her prevailing characteristics. As a child she can be reasoned into obedience when she cannot be coerced or driven.

Wise impulses may be changed to bad ones by improper training. The sensible woman does not allow self-gratification to persuade her to do that which is contrary to reason or sound judgment. She never loses a man so dearly, notwithstanding his habits, which she despises, that "she cannot give him up."

Her good sense tells her that love is short-sighted unless fed by respect, and also that an affection, which is weaker than a bad habit, is scarcely worth having. The sensible woman never does a thing simply because everyone else is doing it, but because she has decided she may safely do it. She cares just as much about the opinions of her neighbors and none too much.

Agricultural.

Scientific Farming. The day of the happy-go-lucky farmer is gone, says the San Francisco Chronicle. There is no use trying. He cannot make it. He will not change his methods he may as well let down and die easy and have it over with. The struggle of the old-fashioned farmer to live upon modern conditions is like the struggle of a man dying of dropsy. He is in constant agony for breath until he can breathe no more.

There are now many farmers who have thrown off the ancient trammels and have learned to know the facts before they act. If they are dairymen they know what their milk costs them, and if it is costing them too much they find where the loss is. If they are stockmen they know how to take care of their stock on digest, and so more, and they do it. If they are winemakers they understand what happens in wine fermentation and so control conditions that the right thing happens. If they are orchardists they so understand the structure of plants and the functions of their organs that they can detect the approach of disease in time to protect from its ravages.

In short, what ever branch of agriculture is adopted they understand the essential facts underlying it, so far as they are understood by any one. The more they know the more they prosper. They know the hard work and, and pretty soon he lies still.

It is a safe rule to lay down that a soil, thoroughly shaded, is always improving. A farmer in England laid a large barn door on a poor spot in a field, and left it a year. The field was then ploughed up, and to his surprise that spot produced as heavy a growth of grain as it had been made with a heavy coat of rich manure.

A farmer in New Jersey read of, and began a series of experiments in covering soils, which proved conclusively the value of a covering for increasing fertility. The farmer who knows this no longer ploughs under his clover, but he mows it, and so keeps the land shaded during most of the summer, utilizing the crop for stock food, and getting the largest development of root.

Every farmer knows that clover improves the mechanical condition of the soil, so that less labor is required to make a good seed bed. It does more than this, however, for it enables the feeding roots of plants to penetrate every part of them, and to more easily avail themselves of the plant food in the soil which the roots of the clover furnish by decay.

I speak of clover as a cleaning crop, by which I mean that when the land is well shaded by it, it keeps it moist, so as to cause the weed seeds to germinate, and then smother them in their infancy, and by a little help from the intelligent farmer, clover will give clean fields.

About Grafting. An Illinois farmer asks Prairie Farmer these questions: "I want to do a little grafting this winter on peach, pear, plum and apple. When is the best time to cut scions to be grafted on root, and what is the best way to preserve them until grafted? What kind of roots would you advise for different varieties, and when do you think the best time to do the work?"

Here is the reply: "Cut the scions after the leaves drop and before the buds begin to swell. Pack them in a box of dry forest leaves, leaving the box on the ground in a damp cellar. Graft peach on peach. Pears may be grafted on apple or pear roots. I prefer pear roots. They should be planted deep. Pears do well on peach roots, but in the North of latitude 40 degrees use native plum roots and use apple on apple seedlings. Use common knitting yarn No. 20, saturated with hot grafting wax for tying. The union of peach, plum and pear grafts should be wrapped with waxed paper, and a little bit of wax should be used to seal the graft to the air. Use the best 1-year old roots. Pack them in clean, moist soil. Do the work in February and plant early in the spring.

The Best Time for Tree Planting. "Early fall is an excellent time for planting trees," writes Thomas Meahan in the September Ladies' Home Journal. "By early fall I mean the last of September and the winter buds fully formed. This is usually a month before the regular fall of the leaves. The leaves are stripped by hand. After the wood is ripe it makes no difference whether the leaves are taken off by Jack Frost, the wind or the human hand. In the Eastern part of Pennsylvania this would be usually about the first of September, and the work of planting can be kept up during October, and often to November or December. But late fall planting in cold climates is as risky as late spring planting. The moisture in the soil is cold, and the roots are not so hard before the new fibers are formed to explain the dry drops. In milder climates planting may be a success all winter.

Purifying the Water. A subscriber of Hoard's Dairyman says: "Here is something that is worth $5 to every farmer in the land. Sprinkle a little lime line in the stock tank, and the particles of green scum will form in the water. When the lime loses its strength and scum begins to form, wash out the tank and repeat the dose. It is cheap, not only harmless, but wholesome, keeps the water sweet and saves work. But do not put in enough to form lime water that is not good for your cows to drink, but a little lime in water aids them in digesting.

Celery. Continue to earth up celery as it grows. This will keep the plants compact and the blanching will be better done. Let this be done in dry weather and make sure that no water is lying in the hearts of the plants at the time. Break the soil well before it is put to the plants and press it gently to each side, taking care not to break the bases in operation. This should be done about once a week until the season closes.

The Ypka moth has escaped from its police bounds in Massachusetts, having appeared in large numbers in the town of Salisbury. Whoa, whoa and troublesome little insect. This is the state approved preparation of $100.000 which will fight him this year is likely not to prove half enough for the purpose.

Every Watch a Compass.

A LITTLE THING WORTH KNOWING WHICH VERY FEW KNOW OF. "Several weeks ago, in London," said an English tourist at the Holland House, "I was standing beside an American acquaintance, when I expressed a wish to know which point was the north. He pulled out his watch, looked at it, and at once pointed in the right direction. I asked him whether he had a compass attached to his watch. 'All watches are compasses,' he replied. Then he explained to me how this was: Point the hour hand to the sun, and the watch is exactly half way between the hour and the figure XII on the dial. For instance suppose it is four o'clock. Point the hand indicating four to the sun, and the XI on the watch is exactly south. Suppose, again, that it is eight o'clock. Point the hand indicating eight to the sun, and the figure X on the dial is due south.

My American friend seemed surprised that I did not know this, and I asked Henry M. Stanley, whom I met the following day, whether he knew of it. He said he had heard of it, but he had never heard of it. So, perhaps, there may be plenty of folks in your country who still remain in my original state of ignorance. I don't know what place my American friend had been to, but somewhere in your great West.—New York World.

Bank Advice. In order that depositors may avoid making errors, the Lincoln National Bank of New York has published the following list of "do's" and "don'ts": Don't draw a check unless you have the money in the bank or in your possession to deposit. Don't test the courage and generosity of your bank by presenting or allowing to be presented your check for a larger sum than your balance.

Don't draw a check and send it to a person out of the city, expecting that it is good before it can possibly get back. Sometimes telegraphic advice is asked about such checks. Don't exchange checks with anybody. This is called "kiting" and is soon discovered by your bank. It does your friend no good and discredits you.

Don't quarrel with the teller because he does not pay you in money exactly as you wish. As a rule, he does the best he can. In all your intercourse with the bank officers treat them with the same courtesy and candor that you would expect and desire if the situations were reversed.

Don't suppose you can behave badly in one bank and stand well with the others. Remember there is a clearing house. Don't think it unreasonable if your bank declines to discount an accommodation note. If you want an accommodation note discounted, tell your bank frankly that it is not in their definition a business note.

Vegetable Foods. A learned scientist has been investigating the effect of food, particularly vegetable, on the human character. He finds that a diet of carrots ameliorates harshness of character and reduces nervous irritability; peas counteracts fatty tissues and encourages joyousness, while turnips have a depressing influence; cabbage is good for pulmonary complaints; while lettuce acts as a sedative upon the human frame, owing to the opium contained in its milky juice.

A sense of an earnest will. To help the loving. And a terrible heart thrill. If you have no power of giving. An arm of aid to the weak. A friendly hand to the friendless. Kind words, as short as a breath. But whose life is endless. The world is wide—these things are small. They may be nothing, but they are all.

The secret of life is not to do what one likes, but to try to like that which one has to do; and one does come to like—in time.—D. M. Craig.

Minard's Liment the Best Hair Restorer. PURITAN BAMES. We hear a good deal these days of "purely natural" hair restorers. They are, for the most part, nothing more than a mixture of kerosene and turpentine, which will burn the hair out of your head. The only hair restorer that is worth anything is Minard's Liment. It is made of purest ingredients, and it restores the hair to its natural color and texture. It is the only hair restorer that is worth anything.

What self-renewal and hair restorer was this? They dropped their heads and were silent. It is the puritan women who are so much for that spirit in our people which gives them the fortitude to endure hardship and make life and fortune for their convictions. The American women of to-day have the constitutions are not rugged or able to endure the hardships of their ancestors. They are peculiar to their sex, and are constant drains upon their vitality, because they dread the local examinations so generally insisted upon by practitioners.

Such women should write Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., giving a full description of their symptoms, history, etc., so that he can give them the best possible medical advice. If Dr. Pierce's medicine is recommended to suit the case the Doctor will say so. If not, then he will give medical advice which will put you on the way to recovery and health.

HICKS & SANCTON Mfg Co. WOOD-WORKERS. SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE A Red Letter Year for 1897!

THE ENTIRE NOVELTY of many of the plots for 1897 is noticeable. For instance, London as written by Charles Dana Gibson. Mr. Gibson has not before appeared as a writer. His visit to London was for the purpose of writing the magazine, for the purpose of depicting the life of the metropolis in its various aspects. It is the most interesting and most up-to-date of all the magazines of the year.

Undergraduate Life in American Colleges. A series of articles touching upon the life of the student in the various colleges of the United States. The articles are written by students of the various colleges, and they give a most interesting and up-to-date account of the life of the student in the various colleges of the United States.

Japan and China since the War will be a most interesting group of articles richly illustrated. The English Sex. Under the title of "The English Sex," Mrs. Helen Watson Moody will write a series of articles on the "English Sex," and the "Case of Marie" as reported in domestic service.

W. B. Howells' History of a Play. In this Mr. Howells gives us the best novel he has ever produced in his delightful vein of light comedy. George W. Cable. In addition to the fiction oriented there will be a series of four short stories by George W. Cable, the only one he has written for many years.

How to Travel Wisely with a minimum of expense. Mr. Lewis Morris Idaho. In two articles, will offer a variety of useful suggestions and data on "Ocean and Land Travel." This will be happily rounded out by an article from Mr. Richard Harding Davis on "Traveling One Month: Their Ways and Methods." The illustrations by American and foreign artists will be highly pertinent.

It is impossible in a small space to even mention the many attractive features for 1897. A beautiful, illustrated booklet has been prepared, which will be sent, postage paid, on request. Scribner's Magazine $3 a year, 25 cents a copy. CHAS. SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Avenue, New York.

The Household.

Let Your Head Save Your Heels. There are tired housekeepers all over the world. Many of them have cares and duties to perform beyond their strength to perform unaided. But a still larger number are weary because they keep house in such a haphazard fashion, without any regular system or method. There is no occupation in the entire list of woman's vocations that demands a higher degree of intelligence than does successful housekeeping. There must be good headwork given to it in order to make the handwork tend to better advantage. There is no rule so good to work from as that homely old bit of advice which one often hears the old-fashioned housekeeper giving to her careless helper. "Let your head save your heels."

There is need enough of repeating this injunction. No doubt all of you can recall a dozen trips made when one would have sufficed had you had your wits about you, and remembered all the things you would want at one trip.

"Why couldn't you tell me everything at once," was the impatient but entirely reasonable protest of a child who had been sent upstairs to her mother's room, first for a pair of scissors, then for a tape measure, then for a spool of cotton, and finally for a garment that was to be mended and had been overlooked.

The child received a sharp reproof for impudence, the mother remaining placidly oblivious of the fact that she needed a reproof for her heedlessness quite as much as did the child for her want of respect.

Joker's Corner.

What Her Heart Said. Confiding Daughter: "Oh, mamma, I really think Mr. Nobrains intends proposing soon." Fond Mamma: "Indeed?" Daughter: "Yes, and if he does, what shall I say?" Mamma: "Be guided entirely by the dictates of your own heart, my child. Remember, my love, that Mr. Nobrains is heir to at least twenty-five thousand a year. You would doubtless go abroad on your wedding tour, and enter the most stylish society on your return. It would be a lovely match for you. But I have no desire to influence your choice. What does your child's heart say?"

Daughter: "You are sure of the twenty-five thousand a year?" Mamma: "Perfectly sure." Daughter: "Then my heart says, yes, yes!" Mamma: "My own darling! What joy will give me to see
