ELECTRICITY ON THE FARM

The progressive Canadian farmer always eager to adopt improved methods of cultivation and production, has now turned his attention to the use of electricity on the farm.

It has been found that electric power can be applied economically to more than one hundred farm and household purposes. Electric current can be used to operate cream separators, milking machines, butter churns, bottle washers, water pumps, washing machines, vacuum cleaners, horse groomers, grain shredders, ensilage cutters, feed grinds, thrashing machines, hay balers, and for refrigerating.

Electric motors are easily installed, they cost little to operate and are always available for instantaneous service and they also affect insurance rates favorably.
