

Canadian Citizenship

If domicile had been acquired within one year only 17 per cent of this group would have been deported; if domicile had been acquired within three years 66 per cent would have been deported. We examined twenty-four cases of British subjects deported on account of mental troubles. Had domicile been acquired in one year only 17 per cent of the group would have been deported; if domicile had been acquired in three years 50 per cent of the group would have been deported.

I have also been given a statement of deportations from Canada from April 1, 1930, to March 31, 1945. The table shows the causes for the deportations and classifies the deportations by British subjects, United States citizens and other aliens. It is rather a long table and with the permission of the committee I should like to put it on Hansard. It is as follows:

Mr. LOCKHART: Has the minister the total admissions?

Mr. GLEN: No; these figures are just of the deportations over fifteen years from April 1, 1930, to March 31, 1945. I will give the totals: Deportations for criminal offences numbered, in the case of British subjects, 1,740; for mental causes, 560, and for other causes 12,067.

Mr. LOCKHART: Would the minister put on the record the admissions as well as the deportations?

Mr. GLEN: I have not the admissions here. The argument I am making is this, that if citizenship were granted after one year's residence in Canada, the experience which the immigration branch has had with deportations is borne out by the table, which shows the actual results over a fifteen-year period.

Mr. GRAYDON: May I suggest that if the minister wants to make his statement complete he should accept the suggestion of the hon. member and also give the admissions.
