

dividual independence is as indispensable as freedom.

"... actually practiced, opinions promote everything innocent. Under the influence of nearly half a century of ferment,
what is intended is intended."

"... really questions
nothing that is not objectionable, no matter how far it goes." *

consideration of individual rights. The

* * *

These concern the protection of individual independence by other measures by which

* * *

Individual is accountable for his opinion that

JAMES J. MARTIN MILL.