LIBERATED EUROPE OUTCOME OF WAR

Sir Edward Grey Sees End of Era of Sword

Rattling.

BLAME QUITE CLEAR

Germany's Consent to Conference Would Have Made Solution Easy.

LONDON, March 22.—(Thru Reuters' Ottawa Agency.)—Sir Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, in a speech delivered at a public meeting this afternoon reviewed the European issues leading up to the present war, and made plain the determination of Great Britain and her allies to insist upon the extinction of German militarism as well as upon the right of the smaller nations of Europe to their unimpaired independence.

Speaking of the origin of the war, Sir Edward Grey emphasized the fact that the struggle might have been avoided by European conference. Germany, he added, judging from her knowledge of the Balkan conference, knew she could have given up upon Europe, and was determined to do so.

He said, Germany refused every suggestion of a conference, and on her side for all time the appalling responsibility for the war. Sir Edward Grey affirmed, amid loud cheers, that this was the fourth time within living memory that Prussia had made war upon Europe, "and we are determined," he said, "that it shall be the last."

Strove for Peace.

The foreign secretary added that it would have been far easier to settle the dispute between Austria and Serbia, which Germany had made the occasion of this war, than it had been to get through the Balkan crisis. Germany knew that Great Britain had not given up on her side for all time the appalling responsibility for the war. Sir Edward Grey affirmed, amid loud cheers, that this was the fourth time within living memory that Prussia had made war upon Europe, "and we are determined," he said, "that it shall be the last."
