Miss Harvey, head of the women's farm department at the government bureau. "Everyone must fully realize by now that the warning given last spring regarding need for more production was fully justified, and that efforts this year should be far greater, but the difficulty with our scheme is to get the right girls. Many of them in the present class are from the ranks of those who did such splendid work last year in the fruit season. These have already demonstrated their willingness and adaptability; but the trouble is to get the farmer to realize that women can be of use upon a that women can be of use upon a farm, that they can fill the gap and Trained Help Needed. "If we cannot blame the farmer who looks twice, at an offer of untrained city help in the shape of men, we must city help in the shape of men, we must realize that the advent of city women may be even less welcomed, so we are aiming first of all at teaching those girls the most essential things. No one need run away with the idea that we think it possible to turn out thorofarmers in a few weeks, or that these girls upon the assumption of these girls upon the assumption of these few classes will go on the farm pre-pared to teach others. But here is the

There are certain things, however, upon the farm which cannot be neglected, such as milking the cows, stock feeding, care of the horses, etc., and if the girls can demonstrate to any farmer that they are able to do these chores so efficiently that they are taken off his hands the objective will be gained. After that it will depend upon the individual as to how far women will prove of value upon the farms. Some girls will be able to undertake more work than others naturally, but there is no doubt about the girls' end of it if the farmers will give them a showing."

Toronto who will feel it keenly, outside of those who operate the places. Many trainmen, postoffice clerks, laborers and others doing night work have been in the habit of eating after midnight, and these legitimate night workers will be affected by the change, if it comes.

Proprietors of several of the restaurants are unanimous in the opinion that a system of alternating nights, such as has been adopted by druggists in some places, would not be feasible.

The whole question as it will be put to the farmer seems to beil down to this: If you must have help and women can prove to you that their work is as good as any hired man's, why not try the women? There is no work is as good as any hired man's, why not try the women? There is no thought of making a monetary success out of the work this year. As in the

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

Glen Grove Parents Will See That Proper Accommodation is Made for Children.

North Toronto parents are just as anxious about the education of their children as anyone, and probably a little more so. At any rate they take enough interest in the affairs of the board of education to keep a closely eve on their activities in and along eye on their activities in and about the Glen Grove district. A site of 5½ acres has been secured on Glen Grove avenue for a fine, new 29-roomed school, and plans have already been spring, to be of such a nature that it can be enlarged at a later date to the

Rev. D. C. MacGregor, of St. Andrew's Church, London, Ont., was the preacher at Convocation Hall on Sunday. He took his text from II. Conv. V.-xiv., "For the love of Christ constraineth me."

Dr. MacGregor said that Paul was under great criticism all the time after he began his ministry. His former associates could not understand his motives, and they attributed them to various causes. Some said he was doing it for gain, that he must be reaping some material reward from it. Others were of the opinion that he was out for power, that he who broke away from the conventional church must be forming a new creed which he expected people to follow, with himself as leader. But Paul explained away all these theories by telling them." The love of Christ constraineth me."

It is a matter patent to anyone, however, who will take the trouble to visit a few of the all-night lunch houses, any time between midnight and three o'clock in the morning, that there are a great many young men of manifest military age, who do not follow any of the occupations abovenamed, sitting around for what seems named, sitting around for what seems an unnecessary length of time after having had something to eat, and who, it would appear, if they are engaged in gainful occupations on regular hours during the day, should be at home in their beds.
