

YORK COUNTY AND SUBURBS

TORONTO JUNCTION.

Toronto Junction, Jan. 20.—The opening services of the enlarged Annet-street Baptist Church were held to-day. Dr. Wm. Stewart of the Bible Training School conducted the morning service and Prof. P. S. Campbell, the evening service, while Rev. J. B. Kennedy of Memorial Baptist Church, addressed the Sunday School and the young people in the afternoon. Special services will be conducted on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The Rev. A. Cowan was presented with a cana set by the officers and teachers of the Sunday school. Complaints were made to the police recently that Wm. H. Brown was selling liquor. They paid him a visit, but could not catch him. The high wind last night and this morning caused the fire alarm bells to ring and several chimneys were blown over. From buildings in the course of erection. There are 91 cuts of stock in the Union Stock Yards for Monday's market.

North Toronto. The wind blew with terrific force on Sunday, doing considerable damage to trees and houses under construction. On East-Street the frame of a new house was leveled to the ground.

Understanding the inclement weather yesterday the services at the Davison Methodist Church were well attended, the special occasion being the 20th anniversary of the church. On Tuesday evening a tea meeting and entertainment will be held.

A missionary meeting will be held at the Epworth Methodist Church to-night under the auspices of the Epworth League. Alfred Simpson has disposed of his residence at 2300 St. George-st. and will move to a new house, which he has just completed.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watt of Balliol-street celebrated their silver wedding last week, a large number of friends participating in the happy event.

The residents of Pleasant-avenue, Dear Park, are annoyed at the nuisance which they say the Cannon Stone Company is causing at the corner. The complainants intend asking the township council to look into the matter.

Kew Beach. The opening services in the new Kew Beach Presbyterian Church, continued over from last Sunday, were successful yesterday. The voluntary offering amounted to more than $150.

Balmy Beach. Interest and attendance on the Sabbath services held in St. John's church under the curacy of the Rev. Mr. McIntyre continue to grow. The offertory yesterday was nearly $77. Rev. Mr. McIntyre has leased for 15 months the residence at 100 Balsam-avenue, and with his mother and sister, removed there during the past week.

Scarboro. The annual meeting of the Scarboro Township Conservative Association will take place in Kennedy's Hall at 7:30 to-night.

Unionville. The Rev. P. H. Howarth has received and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Unionville, Brown's Corners and St. John's congregations, will be inducted on Thursday, Jan. 24, at 2:30 p.m.

BLINDNESS.

Rev. Dr. Wilson's Sermon at the Theatre Service Last Evening.

The special services at the Grand Opera House last night were quite as successful and satisfactory as at the inaugural opening of the preceding Sunday evening. The attendance was quite a large one.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. W. F. Wilson, who found his theme in one of the last miracles performed by Christ—that of restoring the sight of the blind beggar Bartimeus, who appealed to Him when He was passing. "Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me." She showed that there are worse cases of blindness than physical want of sight. Many great men had been physically blind, as Isaac the Hebrew, Homer the Greek, the John Milton the Englishman. Flandel the great German composer, all were blind—and their works have been memorialized and handed down to history, but moral and spiritual blindness is the darkness of life, which presents no redeeming phase of human happiness. Nations are or have been blind. Russia to-day is blind and may not perhaps have her sight restored, except at the cost of the best blood of the nation. The British, the United States, are blind, and the insistent demand of the people for a right and righteous service has not yet restored their sight.

AMERICA'S FINEST CARNATIONS

Will be on View in the City Hall Two Days This Week.

On Wednesday and Thursday the American Carnation Society will hold its annual convention in Toronto. J. H. Dunlop of Toronto is president, and about 300 delegates are expected.

The convention will be held in the city hall, and in connection with it there will be a display of from 10,000 to 15,000 of the most beautiful carnation blooms the country offers. This exhibition will be held in the assembly room of the city hall, and will be free to the public, who must, however, apply for invitations from any local florist. This arrangement is necessary in order to secure the use of the hall.

"Will there be any of those twenty thousand dollar carnations on view?" was asked of President Dunlop. "Why, they're supposed and back numbers now," he replied. "The new varieties are away superior. In fact, you'd hardly recognize them as carnations. It will be a magnificent exhibition."

LICENSEES WANT TOO MUCH

Hitch in Connection With the Petawawa Camp Plans.

Sir Frederick Borden's visit to the city on Saturday was stated to have no significance beyond his desire, being in Toronto, to seize the opportunity to see Premier Whitney and Hon. Frank Cochrane with respect to the Artillery Camp at Petawawa. The provincial government has leased seventy-six acres of land at the nominal rent of $10 a year to the Dominion for military purposes, subject to the rights of the timber licensees interested in the property. Sir Frederick thinks that the licensees are asking a great deal too much, and requested the intervention of the government with a view to securing better terms for a settlement of their claims.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane has consented to see the parties, but, of course, the responsibility of a settlement rests with the Dominion government.

CHANCELLOR DAY SAYS LABORING CLASSES ARE OVERPAID AND RESPONSIBLE FOR SALOONS.

New York, Jan. 19.—The Rev. Dr. James Roscoe Day, chancellor of Syracuse University, in his address to the Syracuse Alumni Association at its annual dinner at the Hotel Astor last night, attacked the arguments in favor of the poor and charitable and philanthropic movements, which had been advanced a few moments before by J. G. Phelps Stokes and Rose Astor Stokes, his wife.

"What is all this cry that is being made about the poor wage earner?" asked Dr. Day. "The wage earners get enough for what they do and a great many of them get more. I know the poor. I have been among them and have studied them. I know that they are the chief support of our civilization and that they are the chief cause of intemperance and shiftlessness, and then the blame is put on the hard hearted corporations."

Would Help Poor to Learn. "We should cease some of the philanthropy which we practice and help the poor to learn their duty, and to make them help themselves."

Dr. Day said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Wants Big Corporations. "I believe in large things, large corporations. The corporations are not big enough. The railroads are being taxed by commerce and traffic, and instead of being discouraged by acts of congress they are given a free rein to reach the limit of their necessities unhindered."

Dr. Day said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes and his wife both announced that they had retired from settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

VIEW OF RICH AND POOR ATTACK AND DEFENCE

Chancellor Day Says Laboring Classes are Overpaid and Responsible for Saloons.

New York, Jan. 19.—The Rev. Dr. James Roscoe Day, chancellor of Syracuse University, in his address to the Syracuse Alumni Association at its annual dinner at the Hotel Astor last night, attacked the arguments in favor of the poor and charitable and philanthropic movements, which had been advanced a few moments before by J. G. Phelps Stokes and Rose Astor Stokes, his wife.

"What is all this cry that is being made about the poor wage earner?" asked Dr. Day. "The wage earners get enough for what they do and a great many of them get more. I know the poor. I have been among them and have studied them. I know that they are the chief support of our civilization and that they are the chief cause of intemperance and shiftlessness, and then the blame is put on the hard hearted corporations."

Would Help Poor to Learn. "We should cease some of the philanthropy which we practice and help the poor to learn their duty, and to make them help themselves."

Dr. Day said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Wants Big Corporations. "I believe in large things, large corporations. The corporations are not big enough. The railroads are being taxed by commerce and traffic, and instead of being discouraged by acts of congress they are given a free rein to reach the limit of their necessities unhindered."

Dr. Day said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes and his wife both announced that they had retired from settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

Mr. Stokes said: "I have practically given up settlement work as a result of the present conditions of the greed of mill-owners. It was useless to try to better the conditions of the mill-owners. He said that he was not a great admirer of the contractor who he asked so high a price for a building. He said, "I cannot get mechanics, and it's no wonder he couldn't. They won't allow mechanics to be made nowadays; every man is climbing over the other to assist his own progress. I believe there is not a greater piece of despotism that rules to-day than labor unionism. It is a hindrance to itself to the advance of man."

TROOPS STORM SEMINARY BOMBARDED BY STUDENTS

Expulsion of Catholics Causes Serious Disturbances, But Resistants Escape.

Angers, France, Jan. 19.—The expulsion to-day of a number of students from the Catholic seminary at Beaulieu was the occasion of serious disturbances.

Troops stormed the seminary building and broke in the doors, while the students, crowding the windows, bombarded them with stones, chairs and tables. The sub-prefect of police, the commander of the gendarmes and the commissary of police were seriously wounded, while fifteen officers and soldiers were slightly hurt.

Optical cases were strewn all over the entrance to the building they discovered that the students had escaped over the back wall.

JEWELRY STORE LOOTED.

Windsor Burglars Make a Clean Job While They're at it.

Windsor, Jan. 18.—One of the most daring robberies that have occurred in this city for some time took place about 1 o'clock Saturday morning, when the jewelry store of Raphael Benette, 70 Sandwich-street, was broken into and goods to the value of nearly $500 taken.

The robbers cleaned up on everything in sight. They gained access to the store thru the backyard, scaling a fence in the rear, breaking down a small shed door, then extracting a pane of glass and pulling aside the bolt.

Optical cases were strewn all over the premises, together with the empty boxes from which articles had been extracted. The thieves loaded up with miscellaneous articles, including chewing gum, tooth brushes, thimbles, perfume, pipes, fine tooth combs, about forty watches and over one hundred eye glasses and spectacles. They also took all the gold-filled chains, spoons, forks and a quantity of razors.

JEWIS OBJECT TO IT.

Saturday Elections Would Prevent Them From Voting.

At the adoption of Ald. McBride's suggestion that civic elections be held on a Saturday, would mean the disfranchisement of the Jewish voters of the city, is a feature of the proposal which has probably not been considered.

The various Jewish societies, however, are alarmed at the prospect and yesterday the Young Men's Zion Club passed a protesting resolution, which will be forwarded to the mayor. The others will do the same.

"We regard the privilege of participating in the city's affairs very highly," said one of the leaders in the community yesterday, "and we would be very sorry if we should be deprived of our franchise, which a Saturday election would surely mean."

Successful in our practice.

Unexcelled in our facilities.

Conscientious in our methods.

Considerate in our charges.

Ever ready to please.

Style and elegance in our glasses.

Successful because we deserve it.

F. E. Luke

Refraction Optician, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

11 King Street West

Blacksmiths' Tools

FORGES ANVILS VISES RASPS HORSE SHOES AND NAILS

RICE LEWIS & SON, LIMITED.

Cor. King and Victoria Sts., Toronto

The Sovereign Bank of Canada.

Quarterly Dividend

SIMPSON COMPANY LIMITED

H. H. FUDGER, Pres.; J. WOOD, Manager. Monday, Jan. 21.

Men's Furs Discounted

GOOD BUSINESS TO BUY NOW

