OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

THE LAND OF DREAMS.

Ah, give us back our dear dead Land of Dreams!
The far, faint, misty hills—the tangled mass
Of brake and thicket—down green woodland ways
The hush of summer—and on amber streams, Bright leaves aloft, amid the faint that creams Round crannied boulders, where the shallows blaze.
Then life ran joyous thru glad, golden days,
And silver nights beneath the moon's pale beams.
Now all is lost. There glooms a dark morass Where throbbled the thrush across the dappled lawn.
Oh, never more shall fairy pageants pass Nor dance of light-limbed satyr, nymph and faun.
Adrift among the whispering meadow-grass, On wind-swept uplands, yearning toward the dawn.

Suffragette Banners.

From The Queen.
The occasion of the meetings of university extension students in Cambridge was utilized for an exhibition of the beautiful banners contributed by the Artists' League for the procession in support of woman suffrage on June 12.

The banners are skillfully displayed, the fine flag of the Cambridge alumnae (the women students, past and present), in rich shades of subdued blue, being hung in the place of honor at the back of the platform. Near it were the banners to celebrate some of the great women who have shown what women can achieve.

On one, in shades of gold, stood forth the word Woman, and the name of Mme.
Curie; on another, with a delicate Madonna lily on a pale mauve ground, the name of St. Catherine of Siena; on another, St. Teresa; on another, Katharine Barlow, whose heroic story is told in Rossetti's Madam, "The King's Tragic-drama."

Elsewhere hung banners to commemorate George Eliot, Charlotte Bronte, Elizabeth Fry, and Emily Philpott (one of the pioneers in opening the medical profession to women), Mary Wollstonecraft, Florence Nightingale, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Josephine Butler, Mary Somerville, Susan B. Anthony, Lydia Becker and many another.

With these were the banners of the great organizations of women suffragists throughout the country, of some of the chief professions in which women are doing good work, and of some of the societies, such as the National Union of Women Workers, Conservative and Unionist Suffragists and Liberal Women Suffragists.

No. 3304.—There is a certain style about the pleated belted-in dresses for little girls that makes them very peculiar. This model has a fitted body lining that may be omitted if preferred, and a full circular skirt, that flares smartly at the lower edge. The waist closes invisibly on the left side under the pleat. Mohair, cashmere, challis, albatross, linen and madras will all make up nicely by this design. The medium size will require 3 yards of 44-inch material.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Alban's Cathedral, Miss Edith Margaret Sweatman, elder daughter of E. H. Grace the Archbishop, and Sweatman, was married to Mr. John Lowe Walton of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Kingston. The church was decorated with masses of asters, ferns, and palms, and the pews reserved for the guests were marked with huge bunches of white satin ribbons. His Grace the Archbishop, assisted by the Rev. Canon Macnab, performed the ceremony, and during the signing of the register Miss Brenda Smellie sang the bride song, and Miss Mary Bartlett of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and the maid of honor, Miss Gladys Sweatman, the bride's sister.
Mrs. Vividly venerated life-and-death nymph de sole, and blue velvet hats, with pink roses, and carried pink carnations. With these effective toilet ribbons were worn the gifts of the groom. Mr. Stanley Sweatman gave his sister away. She was wearing a princess robe of white silk with an overdress of Brussels anouque and tulle veil arranged with a wreath of orange blossoms, worn by her mother on a similar occasion, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The groom's gift to her was a sapphire and diamond ring. Mr. Sweat-man was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Charles Sweatman and Mr.
Temple.

well-deserved vacation and will visit Alta., and Frances Esther, youngest daughter of John Tate How, Allan-dale, Ont., were married by His Lord-house Harrison Armstrong

The loyalty of Toronto playgoers to native sons and daughters who have won distinction in the dramatic profession was demonstrated again last night by the large audience and the very cordial reception given Edgar Selwyn in "Pierre of the Plains," an adaptation of Sir Gilbert Parker's well-known novel, "Pierre and His People."

It was a dual triumph for Mr. Selwyn, since he is credited with the construction of the play in which he takes the leading role. The book with its story of the life of the Canadian west, lends itself much more readily to the uses of the stage than did the "Right of Way," and the skillful manner in which the plot is condensed within four acts so as to realize the strong dramatic possibilities the narrative affords, is worthy of great commendation. With the present vogue which the "cowpuncher" drama enjoys, thanks to the "Girl of the Golden West," and "Salomy Jane," the Canadian west, lends itself much more hopeful of the future. The play has only been on the road three weeks, but shows few of the rough edges which are naturally to be expected of a new production.

The plot is familiar to readers of Parker, and has been substantially followed. The theme is that of the devotion of a road house, is pectively in the prairies has earned him the sobriquet, "Pierre of the Plains." His love for Jen Galbraith, daughter of the owner of a road house, is pectively in his patient fidelity, its impelling force to brave deadly peril, and its quiet acceptance of the hopelessness of it all. The slaying by Val Galbraith of an Indian who had spoken insultingly of his sister, offers Pierre an opportunity to tender his love to her, and in the pressure of action which follows, his heroism and uncon-quenchable martyrdom are made very convincing. There is dramatic matterial of the best where Jen Galbraith unwittingly places her brother in the hands of the law by a romantic night ride to country where she has been N.W.M.P. papers upon the delivery of which the honor of her lover, Serg.
Tom Redding, depends. Perhaps the most vividly seen on a Toronto stage is that between Pierre and his archenemy, Jap Durkin, which concludes the third act, and in which the part of the hapless Durkin, is provided with a sturdy athletic frame, which enables him to withstand a particularly violent fall.

Mr. Selwyn's characterization of Pierre is marked by restraint and power. His voice inflection, gestures and manner of comporting himself, evidence careful study of a type peculiar to the Canadian northwest, and a true, unexaggerated conception of the role.

In response to insistent applause, he made a brief speech, acknowledging his pleasure at being once more on his native heath. Good consistent work is done by the whole cast, including Elsie Ferguson, Grace Howard, Scott Higgins, Richard Sterling, Harrison Armstrong, Clifford Stork and Mr. Dickey.

It is interesting to note that Mr.

Selwyn began his stage career in Toronto at the age of 12 or thereabouts in the late eighties. An airy wooden structure on Richmond-street opposite Shppard-street was the theatre, and a number of his fellow-players are now prominent in the business and professional life of Toronto. They produced their own plays, which were of a gory character, and charged a penny admission.

At The Alexandra.

The perfect rendition of "The Circus Girl" this week at the Royal Alexandra sounds a clarion note of praise for the excellence of the Imperial Opera Company's productions for in presenting this piece the Imperials have ever outranked the original London production, which gave this great English musical comedy its world-wide reputation. While each member of the cast came in for his or her share of applaudition, the marked "hit" of the performance so far has been the song number, "I Want Some One to Call Me Dearly," in which the pretty petite soubrette, Miss Carrie Reynolds, appears. This charming personality is the latest acquisition to the ranks of this large opera company.

Cecil Spooner opened an engagement at the Grand last night to a capacity audience and her new play, "The Girl and the Detective," proved to be a thrilling vehicle, judging from the enthusiastic reception it was given. It affords Miss Spooner a role of the kind in which she is seen to the best advantage, a waltz of the streets—that season, when Miss Spooner's version of the celebrated "Vision of Salome" dancers in the local theatres concluding with her own remarkable dancing comedienne on the stage today. Her comedy was delightful, and particularly pleasant to the eye. Miss Spooners is called upon to bring tears to the eyes of her audience, she does not fail.
She steps out of the part of the irrepressible "Tyler" into that of the woman scorned, or who thinks she has been betrayed, as easily and as surely as any actress in the more expensive theatres.

The production is given a lavish scenic investiture. One scene in particular is a wonderful exhibition of the curtain raiser, a moving picture scene upon which is shown the entire process of making steel from the crude form up to where it is ready for shipment in the form of steel rails and bridge girders. Then up goes the screen and we are in the mill itself.

Every detail of this vast industry has been reproduced on the stage and the picture presented is correct in every detail. During the intermission between the third and fourth act Miss Spooner presents her specialty, "I Can Do That," in which she dances the native dance of every nationality, each accompanied with the national song, concluding with her own remarkable version of the celebrated "Vision of Salome." There have been many Salome dancers in the local theatres this season, but if Miss Spooner's version of this famous happening is to be taken as a criterion, her conception of Salome is frightfully out of place. Miss Spooner's dancing is dignity to her performance; the dancing is remarkable and the dancer's agility superb. Special scenery and electrical effects are carried and the illusion is wonderfully pleasant to the eye. Miss Spooners is to play a week's engagement, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday and a souvenir to all the ladies on Wednesday.

"It's Never Too Late to Mend," the offering at the Majestic Theatre this week, attracted two large audiences yesterday, and the greatest interest was taken in the unfolding of the story, which is in a somewhat higher class than that presented in the "sesational" dramas, that have had a run for a couple of seasons, and which are being gradually taken out of the entertainment line. The heart interest in the story is strong—the kind of interest that takes a big pull at the better feelings of any theatregoer. The play is full of action, replete in incident, strongly dramatic in situation and clever and wholesome from start to finish. It tells the story of a young girl who was kidnapped when a child, and while all her life was spent in the company of thieves and gamblers, she managed to retain her good name thru her innate purity. When Eyon Washburn, as the heroine, proves herself a capable actress and interpreted the role in an interesting manner.
Walter Downing as Dick Farfax also gave a splendid interpretation of the savior lover.

The play is given a pretty scenic equipment and would prove an attractive offering for the balance of the week. As usual a matinee will be given every day.

At Shea's.

Cartier De Haven and Flora Parker in a singing and dancing specialty are the best on Shea's bill this week. De Haven as an exponent of the George Cohan glide is about the smoothest thing that ever was and together with Miss Parker furnishes a typical Cohan production, and they reveal their schooling in the program which states "late stars in George Washington, Jr." The stage setting is sumptuous and songs and pretty features. Lal Lawrence is back again with the company and stands well up in the honor roll of comedians.

The brightest thing in a very satisfactory bill is a neat little talking and singing sketch by Harry Devine and Belle Williams, which is cheerful, well dressed and very refreshing in a day when vaudeville artists attempt so much and accomplish so little. Belle Williams is a pudgy little person with more ginger than she knows what to do with and is the life of the show.
